Pemiscot County Votes In Favor Of Hospital Addition

Agree On Surplus Disposal

NEW YORK (AP) — The controversy between the government and the aluminum industry appeared ended today with agreement on disposal of 1.4 million tons of surplus aluminum.

The industry seemed pleased with the agreement.

The producers and the government came to terms late Tuesday after two weeks of dispute in which President Johnson's administration forced the industry to roll back a price increase.

The controversy began when Olin Mathieson Co. raised prices of ingot half a cent a pound and of fabricated metal one cent a pound.

The government called the boost inflationary and unjustified.

When other producers, including Aluminum Co. of America, the No. 1 producer, joined in the price increase, the General Services Administration threatened to throw 300,000 tons of its surplus metal on the market immediately.

In the face of this, the aluminum companies rescinded the increase and arrangements were made for discussions on orderly disposal of the stockpiled metal.

"This was basically what was being discussed before the controversy," an industry spokesman said. "This is what the industry people were feeling would be the best way of handling the stockpile.

"The advantage now is that we have a planned disposal which, of course, is the way the industry would want it. This is the obvious advantage."

The Pentagon announced that industry and government representatives agreed in principle that the industry will purchase the surplus aluminum at an average rate of not less than 100,000 tons a year or the defense requirement, whichever is greater, but not to exceed 200,000 tons a year.

The Pentagon said the defense requirement for 1966 is estimated to range between 300,000 and 400,000 tons.

The industry representatives who participated in the discussions were from Alcoa, Olin Mathieson, Reynolds Metals Co. and Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co.

Rude Receptions For Kennedy

CONCEPCION, Chile (AP) — Spitting South Americans gave a rude reception Tuesday night to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in Chile and to Secretary of State Dean Rusk in Uruguay.

About 100 pro-Communist students spat on Kennedy at the University of Concepcion, threw eggs, rocks and money at him and drowned him out when he tried to speak to a student crowd of several thousand. It was the only unpleasant note to an otherwise enthusiastic reception in an area where Chilean Communists and Marxist Socialists have their greatest strength.

The eggs and stones missed the New York senator, but spittle fell on his forehead and clothes.

Rusk was the target of a 25-year-old man who slipped up and spat at him in Montevideo just after the secretary had placed a wreath at the monument to Gen. Jose Artigas, Uruguay's national hero. State Department press officer Richard I. Phillips, accompanying Rusk, said the secretary was not hit.

The man shouted "This in the name of my people" as he spat. Police seized him and took him away. In his pockets were leaflets with the words "Fuera Rusk (Rusk get out)."

Kennedy, who is on a South American tour, insisted on going to the university despite warnings of a hostile reception. He waited calmly on the stage of the gymnasium for 20 minutes while the small group of leftists sang the national anthems of Cuba and Chile and screamed "Assassin" and "Yankee go home" at him.

When the senator finally started to speak, the jeerers drowned him out. He asked if they would come forward to discuss matters with him, and the leftists shouted back that he should come to them.

Kennedy started toward them. As he approached, some tried to kick him, others spat at him and others burned a U.S. flag in a corner of the gymnasium.

Other students tried to quiet the leftists. Some challenged them to fight. Aides and newsmen surrounded the senator and he left the building.

Outside some anti-Communist students approached Kennedy's wife, Ethel, and said to her, "Senora, please, forgive us for this shameful situation." This group waited in front of the gym and when the leftists came out set on them with clubs and stones.

Lows ranged from 24 at Kirksville to 32 at Cape Girardeau, which had the state's high of 77 Tuesday.

Lows tonight will be 22-28 in the east and south and in the 30s in the northwest. Highs Thursday will be in the 50s with some in the 60s in the southwest.

Through next Monday temperatures are expected to average 3 to 10 degrees above normal in the east and south and 3 to 6 degrees above in the northwest.

Head Injury Result Of Crash

A two-car collision at 7:30 a.m., three miles north of New Madrid on highway 61, resulted in a head injury to LeRoy Nunn, 33, Lilbourn, the state patrol reports.

Nunn was driving a 1965 Ford, when a 1963 Chevrolet, driven by Eddie Schuerenberg, 52, Kewanee, pulled out on the highway in front of him.

Nunn was taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital, where he was treated for a scalp wound.

Four persons were hurt at 6:05 p.m. Monday when a pickup truck struck the rear of another pickup on Highway 84 at the east city limits of Kennett.

The driver of the front truck, Roscoe Right, 44, of Bragg City, suffered a sprained back. His two sons, Freddie 9, and Roger, 5, incurred minor injuries.

Oscar Leathers, 36, Rives, the driver of the second truck, received a fractured left arm.

Assault Charge Against Risco Teacher Dropped

NEW MADRID - A felonious assault charge against a Risco high school teacher, Ralph Blough, was dismissed Tuesday in magistrate court, when three youths failed to prosecute.

The charge was the outgrowth of a Halloween prank staged by the three youths as they approached his home. They were struck by several pellets fired from a shotgun.

None of the youths were injured seriously. A few shots struck the leg of one of them.

Kansas City Mayor Wins

ST. LOUIS AP -- Kansas City Mayor Ilus Davis won a bet with St. Louis Mayor A. J. Cervantes on Tuesday's bond elections for junior colleges in their two cities.

Each mayor bet that his city would produce a higher percentage of favorable votes. Kansas City voters approved a $25 million bond issue by a four-to-one margin and St. Louis and St. Louis County voters approved a $47,200,000 bond issue by a three-to-one margin.

At stake in the bet was $50 worth of steaks.

Custom Made Purse Stolen From Woman

Mrs. Steve Bell, 822 North Ranney, reported to police that two Negro girls opened her car door as it was parked in front of the C and M Wholesale Company at 6 p.m. yesterday and took her purse.

The purse is custom made and has black with brown stripes. No money was in the purse, but it did contain car keys, note pads and a makeup kit.

$400,000 In Bonds Approved

CARUTHERSVILLE - Pemiscot county voters turned out in good numbers when 28 of the 30 voting precincts favored a $400,000 construction program at the Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti. The vote was 2,195 to 383.

The bond issue total, to be matched by a $400,000 federal grant, will provide a 44-bed addition to the 86-bed hospital. It will be built across the west wing of the three-story hospital.

According to County Clerk Harold Jones, the bond issue would add between an eight and 10 cent levy per $100 assessed valuation of property. Hospital needs have expanded greatly. With the new medicare program beginning next summer present facilites would have been taxed to beyond capacity.

The hospital was built in 1950 and dedicated in 1951, with a 50-bed capacity. The second addition was built in 1961. It then was increased to 86 beds.

The sale of the bonds, according to the presiding judge of the county court, will be in a few months.

Construction of the addition is expected to begin early next spring.

Gun Victim Deserter

AURORA, Ohio AP -- Authorities have identified the body of a man found shot to death as an Army deserter who had posed nearly four months as a secret government agent.

Pvt. Charles E. Lucas, 23, of Gore, Va., apparently took his own life, police said. His body was found near a pond on Cochran Road Tuesday night.

Earl E. Brown, special agent in charge of the FBI's Cleveland office, said Lucas had been declared a deserter from Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., July 22. He had identified himself to an Aurora couple as a government agent when he rented a room, Brown said.

Cervante Thanks General Franco

"It was a nice meeting with a nice man," Cervantes commented.

Justice Awaited Him With Open Arms

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. AP - Steven Schriver, 18, Indianapolis, state reformatory inmate brought here Tuesday to testify in a robbery trial, bolted from deputy sheriffs and fled up a ramp of the new county jail into Maryland Street.

He ran headlong into 60 deputies standing at attention for the funeral of another deputy.

Valley Attacks Continue

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP --North Vietnamese regulars pressed attacks on regrouped U. S. cavalrymen in the Ia Drang River Valley today while B52 jet bombers ripped at Communist entrenchments in nearby hills.

Near the coast, a Viet Cong battalion overran a government district headquarters and its 150-man garrison at Hiep Duc, 28 miles south of Da Nang. U. S. military sources said every building there was reported destroyed. An aerial survey showed no signs of life. The Viet Cong were reported to have left several of their victims impaled on stakes.

Four U. S. planes - three Marine and one Navy -- were lost on a bombing strike against a bridge on the railway line linking Hanoi, North Viet Nam's capital, with its port of Haiphong.

Of the four pilots, a spokesman said two were rescued, one was killed and another is missing.

The battle of the Ia Drang Valley, which newsmen were told already had cost the Communist 890 dead and the greatest American losses in any single engagement of the war, shifted to a new field north of the river.

It was three miles from the helicopter landings site in a jungle clearing 220 miles northeast of Saigon that two battalions of the U. S. 1st Cavalry, Airmobile, Division had defended for three days against repeated North Vietnamese attacks.

The Americans pulled out early today. One battalion shifted back by helicopter to the encampment of supporting artillery, about three miles southeast of the helicopter site. The other hiked out, heading north across the river.

U.S. Inspects Power Systems

WASHINGTON AP -- Federal power commission officials and power industry experts began on-the-spot inspections today of the 23 power systems in and near last week's blackout area.

Among their assignments will be interviews with persons who were in charge of substations and other major operational points when the power failure took place. New York City and much of the Northeast and parts of Canada were without power for as long as 10 hours.

The commission and industry experts also began a study today of reports requested from the 23 power systems detailing what steps the firms had taken, planned or recommended to avert another blackout.

One By One Party Secrets Are Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine having Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon turn up in your neighborhood for a party and you'll get the idea of how it was on Highland Place.

Especially, if the host and hostess — the nation's attorney general and his wife — are trying to keep everything a secret.

It was like a block party with kids and dogs and grownups watching the show. Four boys climbed on a roof to get a better view. Older folks brought their drinks along and launched party-watcher parties.

Suddenly, that sleek, black Rolls-Royce rolled up. The princess, in a white satin gown and white mink wrap, stopped briefly outside the house. Flashbulbs flared.

A crowd pressed tightly against the white fence to watch the excitement at the home of Atty. Gen. and Mrs. Nicholas Katzenbach, the social lions of Washington Tuesday night.

Applause and a loud, appreciative wolf whistle greeted the princess. She waved and smiled.

It was 11 p.m. and the candlelight party with five-man combo was on — an affair for young, gay, talented types, hostess Lydia Katzenbach said the royal couple might not otherwise have met.

As they checked in, past a cordon of reporters and photographers, the secret guests — about 60 — turned out to include the wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara; presidential assistants McGeorge Bundy and Jack Valenti; newspaper columnists Art Buchwald and Russell Baker and television newscaster David Brinkley.

Some screeches of laughter were heard outside when Lord Snowdon donned an ungainly sweater adorned with black ties. Mrs. Katzenbach made it after hearing he once complained he never knew when he went home whether he'd be required to wear blue jeans or black tie.

It looked like a long, gay night.

Missouri Power Parley Tuesday

China's U.N. Bid Fails

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States appeared today to have killed Red China's chances for a U.N. seat this year with a maneuver that set off angry protests from Peking's supporters.

To make sure the door remained closed to Communist China, the United States and 10 other nations called on the General Assembly to stand by its 1961 decision that the seating question required a two-thirds majority.

U.S. representatives have insisted that Peking won't get even a simple majority. They said they called for reaffirmation of the two-thirds rule only to speed up a decision.

Informal polls have indicated, however, that Peking might have enough votes to get in if only a simple majority was required.

The United States has asked to speak just before the vote, apparently in a last effort to bolster its case. U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, who has been ill with a virus, planned to make the final argument.

U.S. delegate Charles W. Yost went before the assembly Tuesday night with the plea that the China representation issue is a vital one which should not be decided by a simple majority. He declared that peace in Asia is involved in the decision and the two-thirds rule is therefore mandatory.

Yost rejected claims by Peking's supporters that Red China might be more receptive to unconditional negotiations to end the Viet Nam war if it belonged to the world forum.

Vatican Council Approves Birth Control Statement

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican Ecumenical Council today approved an interim statement on birth control that some experts say eventually could provide the basis for a moral acceptance of contraceptives.

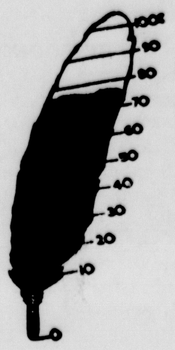

The council also took a showdown vote on its controversial declaration deploring all nuclear stockpiling as a threat to mankind. Results will not be announced until Friday at the council's next working session.

Winding up three days of voting on the council's schema on modern world problems, the bishops took a ballot on the document's entire chapter on the family and marriage.

The key paragraphs of this section stress conjugal love in marriage as an element important not only for bringing children into the world but as a physical expression of mutual love between husband and wife. The document affirms that a couple must follow church teaching on birth control but leaves the way open for changes in that teaching.

The chapter was approved by a vote of 1,596-72, with another 484 bishops approving "with reservations."

The nature of these reservations was not known. They could apply to the birth control paragraphs or to other parts of the chapter.

Scarbrough urges all people, who supported the fund in previous years to help again. He asked that they not wait to be contacted but to get in touch with him, Mrs. Jewell Allen, executive secretary, a United director, or mail a check or pledge to Mrs. Allen.

Mrs. Allen announced these businesses have contributed 100 per cent.

Suggests Nuclear Weapons In Germany

NEW YORK AP -- An American official has suggested equipping West Germany with nuclear weapons capable of reaching Soviet nuclear sites in western Russia, the New York Times reported today.

In a dispatch from Washington, the Times said the suggestion was offered by John G. Palfrey of the Atomic Energy Commission as a personal view, intended as a possible reconciliation of two problems:

-- The stalemate with Russia over negotiation of a treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

--The desires of West Germany for greater participation in its nuclear defense.

Try To Break Deadlock

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — House and Senate conferees resumed efforts today to compromise their deadlock over House redistricting.

When the legislature adjourned last week, there was no sign of any yielding on either side.

The Senate has been insistent that if a redistricting commission failed to act, House members would have to run at large. The theory is this would apply sufficient pressure to force an agreement by the commission.

The House is opposed to that system. Instead it passed a bill carrying a provision that would let the House redistrict itself if the commission broke down.

Some legislators have expressed the fear the impasse is so serious the special session might wind up doing nothing. This is the fifth week and the session limit is 60 days.

Also nanging fire is a bill to increase major welfare payments, including old age assistance and aid to the disabled, from $70 a month to $75.

As passed by the House, the bill provided an old person could live with relatives, no matter what the income in the home, and still be eligible for his pension.

It also authorized the old folks to have up to $1,000 in burial or life insurance without affecting their eligibility.

The Senate Welfare Committee struck out both provisions and the amended bill is pending in the Senate.

Club Told Of Bank Services

Pat Lea, vice president of the Bank of Sikeston spoke to the Kiwanis club Tuesday night on "Banking -- Old and New".

He touched on the two different types of banks -- state and national, the distinctive powers of each and discussed services of banks.

He stressed the importance of building up the economy of the area by attracting new industries and by developing industries, which would use local products. He said that he was sure banks would take more interest in such developments.

Next week the club will entertain 110 farmers of the area.

Poor Countries In State Not Lowest In U.S.

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- People who live in the poorest counties in Missouri live rather high on the hog as compared with those other counties in the country, according to facts and figures dug up by the bureau of the census.

This is proved by information as to income for people in 10 of the so-called poorest counties in Missouri. It appears that Washington poverty officials who claim they worry about poverty do not know all the facts.

New Madrid county is ranked as the county in the state with the lowest per capita income.

New Madrid county has a higher per capita income than the people of 301 other counties in the nation.

Pemiscot may have higher income than 518 counties in the nation, but it is rated as being ninth in low income in the state. It is a county that poverty officials are worrying about, or at least they claim they are.

It's possible these counties want projects, which will improve their economy, but the point is that many of the so-called poor counties are not poor in comparison with other counties of the nation.

Review Problems Of Hemisphere

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Nineteen foreign ministers of American republics assembled today for a basic, wide-ranging review aimed at updating the inter-American system to cope better with the hemisphere's changing political and economic problems.

The first day's program of the special inter-American conference of foreign ministers included a welcome by President Humberto Castello Branco of Brazil, get-acquainted meetings and the formal opening session tonight with Castello Branco giving the keynote speech.

Thursday the conference — the first such in 11 years — begins to get on with its business. The parley, expected to run into early December, will consider proposals for revamping the charter of the Organization of American States. These could be taken up at a charter revision conference next spring.

Cuba and Venezuela were absent. Cuba is barred from the OAS because of its Communist government, and Venezuela does not recognize the military government of Brazil, the host country.

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, arriving Tuesday night from a brief side trip to Argentina and Uruguay, predicted that "a broad consensus will develop" from the conference.

Hockaday On Job As Patrol Leader

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Edmund I. (Mike) Hockaday, 54, took over today as the new superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

Hockaday, who has been second in command, was appointed Tuesday by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes to succeed Col, Hugh H. Waggoner, who died unexpectedly at Poplar Bluff last Wednesday.

Hockaday and Waggoner joined the patrol in the same class of 35 on July 1, 1937, and have worked closely together for years.

He told newsmen "I'm sure we'll carry on in the pattern established by Waggoner and the governors he served under."

Hockaday did not announce immediately who would succeed him in the No. 2 job.

The new superintendent has served in every rank, much of the time at general headquarters in Jefferson City where he worked in the finger-print and record section, was in charge of the crime laboratory and was commanding officer of headquarters.

In 1961 he was assigned by the governor to be acting chief of police in Kansas City for five months.

He is a graduate of Westminster College at Fulton and of the FBI's National Police Academy. He took special training in homicide investigation at Harvard and attended the supervisory officers' training school at Northwestern.

He studied use of the lie detector under its inventor, Leonard Keeler.

Hockaday and his wife have two daughters, Mrs. Charles Czarlinsky of Jefferson City and Mrs. William E. Dawdy of Springfield.

Search For Girl's Body In Desert Near Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — In a stretch of desert just outside southern Arizona's biggest city, a search goes on for the body of pretty Alleen Rowe.

The 15-year-old girl's mother, Mrs. Norma Rowe, identified two metal hair curlers uncovered at the spot Tuesday as those of her daughter's. Alleen was wearing the curlers when she disappeared May 31, 1964.

Two young people charged with murdering Alleen helped officers in the search, but their attorneys said they would not allow John Saunders, 19, and Mary Rae French, 18, to go back today.

Alleen reportedly was wearing two rings, and Sheriff Waldon Burr said he would use a metal detector today to hunt for her shallow grave.

Officers said the grave may be deeper now because of an unusual amount of rain that fell in Tucson last year. Rains could have moved a large amount of sand from higher areas to where the grave was dug.

The possibility that the girl's body could have been moved by one of her attackers also was being considered, officers said.

Although the girl's mother said her daughter had told her of a teen-aged sex club which she refused to join, police discounted this.

"There is nothing to substantiate her belief at this time," Police Chief Bernard Garmire said.

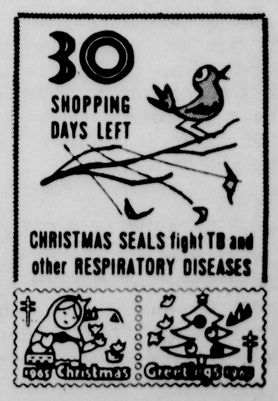

An informer told police that Alleen was killed by Saunders, Miss French and Charles Schmid, 23, Garmire said. All three were charged with murdering her and were jailed without bond.

Schmid, a former gymnastics champion, also has been charged with murdering two other girls. The bodies of Gretchen Fritz, 17, and Wendy Fritz, 13, daughters of a prominent Tucson surgeon, were recovered last week after the same informer had led officers to the scene.

Miss French, according to Tucson police, said in a written statement that she, Saunders and Schmid took Alleen to the desert. The statement said Saunders and Schmid led the victim away from the car and beat her with rocks until she died.

The girl said she heard Alleen screaming. Shortly afterward, Schmid came back for a shovel and Miss French followed him to the body. After burying the body, the three left the site.

No motive has been disclosed by police.

PERSONAL DEBT IN A CONSUMER ECONOMY

Buy now, pay later has become a fixture of American family life in the "soaring '60s." The long, uninterrupted business expansion, now in its 58th month, has been fueled by the readiness of consumers to assume a heavy burden of debt and of lenders to advance easy credit. But the voices of caution are beginning to be heard. In essence they warn that acceleration of personal debt has become so rapid as to threaten both the individual borrower and the soundness of the over-all economy.

Quality as well as quantity of credit is in question as retailers and lending institutions induce more and more consumers to go into debt on a wide range of goods and services. Will more purchases made on the "never-never," as the British refer to installment buying, actually turn out that way -- never paid for? While delinquency on installment loans has risen only slightly in recent years, other danger signals are visible in the high-flying consumer credit field. Not the least of these is widespread consumer ignorance of the true costs of buying on the installment plan.

Federal Reserve Board statistics show that American families are quite willing to go into debt to buy things they want. At the end of September, a total of $81.9 billion was outstanding in short - and intermediate-term consumer credit -- up $8.4 billion from a year earlier. Interest and other charges on this huge volume of debt cost consumers more than $10 billion a year.

Not included in the estimates of consumer credit are the mortgages outstanding on owner-occupied homes, which total nearly $200 billion. To some experts a total of $282 billion in combined consumer credit and mortgage debt seems staggering. William McChesney Martin Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has pointed to the current rise as one of the "disquieting similarities" between the present prosperity and that of the 1920s, which culminated in the Great Depression.

"In fact," Martin pointed out in an address last June, "the expansion of consumer debt arising out of both residential mortgages and installment purchases has recently been much faster than in the '20s." Other economic experts, however, point out that the outstanding consumer debt is buttressed over-all by more than $2 trillion in consumer assets. The assets take the form of fixed capital in homes and consumer durables as well as bank deposits, stocks, bonds, and insurance and pension reserves.

About half of all American families have some installment debt, but the burden is unevenly spread. About 10 per cent of all families, for example, lay out more than 20 per cent of their disposable income (income left after taxes(to meet debt payments. The Federal Reserve Board classifies such families as "heavily burdened borrowers." For the nation as a whole, 14.4 per cent of disposable income goes for repayments on installment debt--up 2.6 points in a decade. An otherwise optimistic Federal Reserve study of consumer debt states: "The continued upward drift in the repayments ratio is a matter of concern. Many families with debt have few or no liquid assets to fall back upon."

For the nation as well as for the individual family, consumer credit is a good servant but a bad master. Under the worst circumstances, a large number of loan defaults might trigger severe depression. Even assuming that loans are paid on time, excessive debt expansion can harm the economy. This is because installment buying puts a mortgage on future income. Thus it is argued that debt-fueled expansion will prove unsustainable as consumers become indebted to the point where they cannot afford to take on further obligations. As the saturation point is neared, so the reasoning goes, the economy will lose the stimulus of credit buying. Once the economy turns down, moreover, the slackening in business and decline in consumer incomes would lead to sharp increases in delinquencies and personal bankruptcies.

Such bearish views are not shared by all economists. Many believe the threat of excessive debt expansion has been overstated. They say the idea that there is some percentage of disposable income above which consumer repayments cannot safely go has been disproved. In their opinion, demographic changes alone--the growing number of "young marrieds"--guarantee continued growth in borrowings. Rising discretionary income (income left after basic expenditures) will provide both the will to buy on credit and the means of repayment. This seems to be the official view of the Johnson administration. It has made it clear in recent weeks that it does not favor high interest rates as a means of reducing demand for credit.

YULE CAKES IN ERIN

Many residents of Ireland dub Christmas Eve the "Night of Cakes". The nickname stems from an ancient December 24th tradition on the Emerald Isle of baking special Christmas cakes spiced with caraway seeds.

House of Representatives constitute a damnable outrage.

And that is understatement.

At a time when statesmanship of the highest order is urgently needed, House leaders of both political parties are indulging in political opportunism that would disgrace the seamiest precinct boss.

It truly is a case of Nero Graham and his sidemen fiddling while Missourians burn.

Slowly, slowly, surely the truth came out last Tuesday and Wednesday. The House leaders care not one whit what the majority of their colleagues think, or what the people of this state need and deserve.

The truth that became appallingly apparent simply is this:

The House leaders are determined by fair means -- or foul -- to circumvent the will of the House majority, the will of the Senate, the will of the Governor and, more importantly, the will of the electorate.

These petty politicians are determined to ram an unreasonable plan for realigning the Missouri House past all obstacles. No matter what the cost.

The Senate has been more than fair, more than patient, more than willing to compromise in any reasonable manner. Too patient. Too willing to compromise. Too sensitive to House demands and emotions.

In the opinion of many, the Senate retreated two steps too far backward in proposing the backstop methods of reapportionment by the State Supreme Court or appointment of a second redistricting commission.

We think they would have done well to stick firmly to the concept of an at-large-election if the Commission failed to do its job. That's the way it is done in the Senate. That's the way it should be done in the House.

We hope no Missouri voter is any longer willing to believe that the House leadership is acting out of public interest. They made unmistakably plain in rejecting all Senate amendments that they were acting in self-interest only.

How utterly ridiculous it was for Rep. Mel Carnahan, House majority leader, to stand on the floor of the House and candidly admit he could find no valid reason to oppose several of the Senate amendments.

And then follow this statement with a fervent plea that the House refuse to accept them.

By this blanket, headlong rejection, the Senate was placed in the position of not knowing which amendments the House really found objectionable.

Amendments by the other house are usually taken up one by one in the Assembly so a conference committee, if one is needed, can act efficiently. That is what should have been done in this matter.

Carnahan is not the only puppet that has been manipulated in this farce by House Speaker Thomas Graham. He has a Republican counterpart, Ronald Belt of Macon, who is so utterly lacking in comprehension of his duties and responsibilities as a legislator and as a minority leader as to join eagerly in the cabal.

The House forces that are using every trick to gain their ends act with much boldness because they have the impression Missourians neither understand nor care about the reapportionment issue.

More Missourians than they would believe do understand the issues. And are much concerned.

We urge these citizens to make their concern known to legislators.

If the Senate falters, if the Press relents, if the people fail to act strongly and immediately, reapportionment problems will disturb the political life of this state well past 1970.

STUFFING THE TURKEY

Groceries cost more these days, and the Thanksgiving meal will be no exception. By one estimate (Wall Street Journal, Nov. 8), a family of four will pay nearly $7 for turkey and the trimmings this year -- up about 5 per cent from last year. A 10-pound turkey that cost $4.50 at retail in 1964 will cost about $4.90 this year. Such trimmings as green beans, pumpkin, and wild rice are costlier than in 1964, but cranberries are unchanged.

Agriculture Department statisticians say growers will raise 104 million turkeys this year, up from 99.7 million in 1964. Population growth presumably is absorbing some of the increased output and putting pressure under prices. And more of the birds are being processed into new boneless "roasts" and other ready-to-eat forms that cut into supplies.

Sidney Margolius, a consumer expert for Steel Labor, says the best buy in turkey this year is the larger bird. Turkeys over 16 pounds are running about the same price as last year. Toms over 26 pounds actually sell for a bit less than last year. Margolius advises against buying frozen prestuffed turkeys because the consumer ends up paying a turkey price for stuffing that includes a large percentage of water. Mom also is advised that canned and frozen candied sweet potatoes cost twice as much as fresh.

AUGUST EMPLOYMENT GAINS

While the unemployment for workers as a whole remained at the July level of 4.5 per cent in August 1965, the lowest level since October, 1957, the job picture improved in August for Negroes, teen-agers, blue-collar workers and those who had been unemployed for a long time.

In August the unemployment rate among Negroes at 7.6 per cent was somewhat less than double the white rate of 4.1 per cent. It had been considerably more than double the white rate in July and in most months of the last two years. The teen-ager rate declined from 13.2 per cent to 12.4 per cent; blue collar workers from 5.5 per cent to 5 per cent.

An example of this progress in Negro employment is shown in General Electric Company's publication, "At Work in Industry Today," detailing 50 case reports on Negroes at work, and how they earned their jobs in industry.

QUESTIONABLE REMEDY

No one with good sense minimizes the unemployment problem, which has been a sore spot for years and threatens to become worse. But some of the proposed solutions would in all probability, result in graver problems still.

One is found in the position of major labor groups. To quote the New York Times, which certainly cannot be called anti-labor: "Thus far labor's only basic remedy for unemployment is the synthetic one of a 35-hour work week to be established through Federal legislation . . . such a cut in work schedules would merely drive up costs and thus make it harder for American goods to compete in domestic and world markets. Moreover, it is a retreat from the fuller use of our materials, manpower and productive facilities when poverty remains a crucial challenge in large sections of our own country and even larger sections of Asia, Africa and Latin America."

To impose new and higher costs on our production machinery, at a time when competition for markets and consumer acceptance grows more and more intense, would be to invite the worse sort of troubles. And it would invite more, not less, unemployment.

OUR DISFRANCHISED CITIZENS

In 1960, eight million Americans were, in effect, disfranchised. They could not vote for President. That startling point is stressed in a Saturday Evening Post editorial. An American Heritage Foundation study is the authority for the figure.

The reason for this is that our election laws have not kept up with modern mobility. Millions of citizens change their state of residence every year, often for compelling business reasons. Conditions are vastly different from the old days, when it was commonplace for families to stay in one community for generation after generation.

The Post remarks, "State legislatures can remedy this situation by shortening the residence requirements -- they range up to two years in some states -- and by permitting citizens who have recently moved to vote by absentee ballot in the states they have left. Fifteen states have taken steps to correct this injustice. The rest should follow suit."

A "TAX OUTRAGE"

In a recent issue, Railway Age published a lengthy special report on "Tax Outrage". That's a strong phrase -- but none too strong for the case in question.

This particular outrage deals with the discriminatory taxation levied against railroad property in 24 of the states. In one year, says Railway Age, this discrimination resulted in the incredible total of $112,979,417 in overtaxation.

Without going into the complexities of the issues, in the magazine's words, "The heart of the problem is assessment of rail property at a higher value than it actually has." As a specific example, it tells of one railroad which discontinued certain of its car shops some years ago. It had to sell, for $500,000, property which had been carried on the tax rolls at $1,500,000. Then, to add insult to injury, when the new owner took over the property the tax authorities lowered the assessment to a mere $300,000 -- just a fifth of the figure at which it was carried under railroad ownership.

It is significant that the late President Kennedy, in his transportation message of 1962, which is spoken of as an historic document of its kind, emphasized that discriminatory taxation is among the greatest problems the railroads face, and urged remedial action.

The railroad goose that lays golden eggs is being slaughtered. Its case for tax equality for railroad property -- like all other property -- is overwhelmingly strong.

FOR REEL FUN

As millions of American fishermen take to the streams and lakes this spring, a good percentage will owe a portion of their pleasure and success to a quiet 49-year-old Minnesota businessman.

Lloyd Johnson is living proof that the Horatio Alger tradition still flourishes in America. Fifteen years ago, he was an expert machinist, working for a wage. Today he is president and owner of Johnson Reels, Inc., one of the leading American producers of quality fishing reels and rods. Products carrying his name are used in every state and overseas.

Like most American success stories, this one happened thru a man's determination to make something work better. Just after World War II, American servicemen had returned from Europe enthusiastic about the fishing potential of the European fixed-spool, open-faced spinning reels. With them, ultra light lures and line could be used and backlash was eliminated.

But while these early spinning reels were being hailed as the answer to every fisherman's problems, some anglers were learning that they, too, had annoying traits. One of these was Mr. Johnson, who put his inventive genius to work. The result that came out of his basement workshop was the closed-face spinning reel, a typically American improvement on the original spinning reels.

The first and succeeding Johnson Reels enclosed the line-carrying spool with a cover and fed the fishing line through a hole into the rod guides. This feature eliminated many of the exasperating tangles that wind or miscasts could inflict on the spinning fisherman. And with simplicity as his keynote, Mr. Johnson introduced a thumb button to release and stop line action.

This was the first of a number of innovations the Minnesota inventor contributed that have become standards for American fishing tackle. Through licensing arrangements, even competitors use many of his basic patents.

So anglers around the world who may enjoy today hours of effortless casting without infuriating birds' nests to untangle owe a nod of appreciation to a Minnesotan named Johnson.

FABIANS AND FANATICS

Before the turn of the century, Fabian socialism began to permeate the United States, proceeding primarily through Harvard. American Fabians established the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, which later became the League for Industrial Democracy and spawned the Americans for Democratic Action.

Such ISS members as Walter Lippman, Felix Frankfurter, Roger Baldwin, Harry F. Ward and Stuart Chase achieved public prominence.

John Kenneth Galbraith was a leader in establishing the theories of Fabian Socialist John Maynard Keynes as the standard for economic thought in American education.

In all their endeavors, the Fabians have worked toward the same objective sought by the Marxian socialists of the Communist Party: a socialist America. And they have worked alongside the Marxists in many instances.

How well the Fabian strategy for undermining American society has worked is evident in the current disorders plaguing our university campuses. The part played by professors in misguiding the rioting students attests to the success of the Fabian penetration of faculties. And the most radical groups involved in the fomenting of the riots, the DuBois Clubs, are named for one of the pioneers of Fabianism in America, W. E. B. DuBois (Harvard, 1890), who was also a member of the Communist and Socialist Parties and the ISS.

A New York Legislature Inquiry in 1920 found that Lippman and Frankfurter, who managed to become special assistants in the War Department in 1917, used their influence to aid left-wing conscientious objectors during World War I. The "objectors" were radicals who refused to support "any war under the capitalist system." It appears that the same sort of influence continues to aid leftist "objectors" today. HLH

NEW YORK (AP) — Omar Sharif, the most famous film sheik since Rudolph Valentino, thinks it is time the public let him down off his camel.

The young Egyptian-born actor, who won an Academy Award nomination for his portrayal several years ago of Sheik Ali in "Lawrence of Arabia," remarked:

"Many think I always wore robes and rode a camel. This is untrue. I hardly ever saw a camel before except on a cigarette box.

"It's hard to shake the image created by your first success. Most of the time one doesn't succeed in shaking it. But that is better than to have to try to shake the image of your first flop."

Slender, still in his early 30s, Omar is good-natured, somewhat shy in manner. As Michel Shalhoub, son of a Syrian lumber importer, he was reared in Cairo and graduated from an English college there. A year later he turned to acting after he found the lumber business left him with a wooden feeling.

He made a couple of dozen films in Cairo, became a star in the Arab world, and married Faten Hamama, Egypt's best-known actress. They have a son, Tarek, 8.

He picked the name Omar Sharif — which means "the honorable Omar" — because of its sound. But when he first appeared on the "Lawrence of Arabia" sets, Irish actor Peter O'Toole objected:

"Nobody could be called Omar Sharif. I'm going to call you 'Cairo Fred.'"

The nickname stuck.

"Orientals are violin people," he remarked. "They are emotional and sentimental and self-indulgent.

"In Egyptian melodramas your success was judged by how much you could make the audience cry. Since then I've had to learn emotional restraint — to realize that the most moving thing is not someone actually crying, but someone who wants to cry and is fighting it."

Sharif, a cultured man who speaks six languages, said that as an Oriental he had met with some difficulties in adjusting to the Western tempo.

"It is so speedy," he observed drily. "I try to sleep as long as possible because it is the slowest thing I know.

"An Oriental, as long as he has food enough for this day, neither works nor worries about tomorrow.

"But I suppose speed is necessary in the large cities of Europe and America because life there is so tough and competitive. If you don't keep at it, someone will take your place."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The Rio de Janeiro foreign ministers conference, opening today, finds most of the Democratic leaders of the Western Hemisphere lined up against the United States, the military dictatorships behind us.

It also finds American policies in Latin America more on the spot than at any time since the 1920's when we landed Marines in Nicaragua, on top of earlier Marine landings in Haiti and Santo Domingo.

Much of the anti-American sentiment which will be voiced in the Rio conference results from the personality and policies of Tom Mann, the President's Texas friend whom he made Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs, and later promoted to be Deputy Under Secretary of State.

On one occasion, President Johnson called in a group of Latin American ambassadors and, in an informal chat supposed to be strictly confidential, tried to sell them on Tom Mann. He described Mann as a brilliant, dedicated, but misunderstood individual.

The Latin ambassadors went away still "misunderstanding" Mann. The President made no impression on them whatsoever. They regard Mann as too military-minded, much too quick on the draw, and a bad influence around a Texas-born president also inclined to shoot from the hip.

The two chief issues to be debated at the Rio conference will be:

1. The removal of the OAS headquarters from Washington so it won't be under the domination of the United States. This will probably fail.

2. Blocking any future Pan American police force. This will probably succeed.

For the first time in history a Pan American police force is operating in the Dominican Republic, and, although it was hurriedly thrown together in order to take the curse off the American military occupation of that country, it could become an important precedent for Pan American stability and for use in revolt-torn countries.

If, for instance, Cuba should kick out Castro and a government vacuum exist there, the United States would like to have a Pan American police force which could be thrown in to restore order.

Such nations as Mexico, Chile, and Uruguay, however, are gravely suspicious of any Pan American army. They regard it as a concealed arm of U.S. militarism. The debate over it will be hot and heavy at Rio de Janeiro.

The appearance of two new missiles in the Soviet anniversary parade doesn't alarm American observers. One is a mobile ICBM launcher; the other could fire a nuclear warhead from orbit.

U.S. observers suspect that neither is more than a prototype, probably intended to mislead the West. They recall how the Red army fooled them 15 years ago by showing off new bomber models while secretly producing intercontinental missiles. The Pentagon took the bait and diverted most of its money into bombers instead of missiles. As a result, Russia got the jump on the United States in the missile race.

American experts claim the two new Soviet missiles aren't as effective as weapons already in the American arsenal. This time, the Pentagon won't divert money from its present programs to build orbital and mobile launchers. The Russians themselves aren't expected to build more than a few showcase models as they did with those new bombers 15 years ago.

Gifts to GI's -- The Defense Department is stuck with a staggering accumulation of gifts for GI's. Tens of thousands of tons of books, games, cookies have piled up in cities across the country, apparently triggered by demonstrations against the war in Viet Nam. Americans have been contributing gifts for GI's as a way of showing the home front is behind them--eight pounds of gifts for every GI in Viet Nam. The accumulation is so tremendous the Defense Department has no way of delivering it without impairing vital military shipments.

Lindsay's Future -- Most professional politicians disagree with newspaper speculation that John Lindsay could use the mayor's office as a springboard to the White House. They point out that Lindsay, after four years as mayor, will be lucky to get reelected. New York City's problems are too overwhelming for one man to solve. Furthermore, he must work with a city council that is predominantly Democratic. The problems are more likely to overcome Lindsay, the politicos claim, than the other way around.

Bailey Worries -- Democratic National Chairman John Bailey, worried about Republican gains in the big cities, is planning a massive campaign next year to hold onto the congressional seats that the Democrats won in the 1964 election. Bailey will concentrate on helping the freshmen, providing them not only political ammunition but a publicity bombardment. He will hire the largest publicity staff ever to be used in an off-year election, to help them take advantage of every possible news break in their home town papers and radio-TV broadcasts.

775 Attend Final Session Of Convention

An audience of 775 attended the final session of a three-day convention of Jehovah's Witnesses held last weekend in the American Legion Hall.

The peak attendance came as Bruce E. Giffin, district supervisor for the Witnesses in the mid-South, spoke on, "What Does the Resurrection of the Dead Mean for You and Yours?"

Mr. Giffin said, "The resurrection is a teaching unique to the Bible. No other books that are considered 'holy' by large religious bodies teach the resurrection."

He said that the resurrection of the dead "is not far off because Bible prophecies like Revelation 11:15-18 are being fulfilled and this shows that the resurrection is at hand."

According to local presiding minister, Russell Knauer, the gathering here was a precedent-setting one.

"In addition to assembling for the convention sessions we used much of Saturday and Sunday mornings and afternoons calling on residents here in Sikeston encouraging them to intensify home Bible study. Hundreds of Witnesses participated and we can safely say that Sikeston has seen its greatest house-to-house Bible teaching campaign," he said.

Mr. Knauer said this was the second time since 1963 that the Witnesses used Sikeston as a convention site.

Ten Members Attend Mission Meeting

MOREHOUSE -- The Women's Missionary Union met Thursday night at the First Baptist Church for their society program with ten members attending and the president, Mrs. Berniece Bryant, presiding.

The program opened with a business period. Minutes were read and approved and the financial report was given by Mrs. Ed Orr. A discussion planning a bridal shower in honor of Mrs. Don Savage, the former Sharon Higgs, followed. The shower will be Nov. 18 in the church basement.

The program followed. The topic, "The Indonesian Story" was presented by Mrs. Fred Laminack. The prayer chairman, Mrs. Mont Frank, had the call to prayer, read the prayer calendar and led in prayer for missionaries. Mrs. Laminack gave the devotional thoughts, "The Old, Old Story". The scripture reading was from John 4:15,26. Others participating on the program were Mrs. Bryant and Mrs. Glenn Bohannon. Mrs. Ode Henning gave the benediction. Others attending besides those previously mentioned were Mrs. William Gurley, Mrs. Marion Clark and Mrs. Niva Breeden.

BURR OAK, Iowa (AP) -- Mr. and Mrs. Ted Emmons' plans for a boat trip were changed by the housekeeping arrangements of a robin family. The couple had hung their oars on rafters in the boat shed when they put their craft away. When they started to get it back out, they discovered that two robins had used the oars in building a nest so they elected to postpone the boat trip till the tenants vacated their quarters.

Four members of the family, and Elwood Pickett, from Matthews are still in the woods. This makes the second deer Robert has killed. His first was in 1963 when he shot an eight point buck. He was probably the first boy from Sikeston to kill a deer this season.

FREE! THE STORY OF POPE PAUL VI

Vicar of Christ— The Pilgrim Pope

From St. Peter to Pope John XXIII, of course, the Papacy has played a historic role in human affairs.

But never before has a Pontiff of the Church stirred the imagination and interest of the whole wide world as does the present Pope—Paul VI.

He is the first Pope since St. Peter to return to the Holy Land — to the sites made sacred by the life and passion of Jesus. The first in 525 years to meet personally with a Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church ... the first ever to visit India ... the first to set foot on the soil of the United States.

Even more historic, however, is the Holy Father's apostolate for spiritual unity and good-will among all the followers of Jesus Christ ... and for renewal within Christ's Church to meet the challenges of the modern world. Leaders of all faiths are aware, of course, of the Holy Father's aims and his dedication to this great Christian cause. But the rank and file of all Christians should similarly understand ... and we've put a thumb-nail story of Pope Paul into a free pamphlet you can read in a matter of minutes.

It is the story not only of Paul the priest, the Cardinal and finally the Pope, but of the world-wide society of the faithful over which he presides as the Vicar of Christ, the successor of Peter, "the servant of the servants of God."

Although his predecessor, Pope John XXIII, instituted the move for Christian unity, this little story reports the dedication of Pope Paul to the same purpose in these words voiced before he became Pope: "The first action of the apostle must be that of presenting to the world an admirable, attractive Christianity. The first testimony will be that of our unity, our mutual love, our interior cohesion. The second will be that we love those whom we wish to evangelize ... It is not a conquest but a service."

Whatever your church affiliation may be ... and even if you belong to no church at all ... the quest for Christian unity will affect your world, your life, your family. And you should be interested in what Paul VI — the Vicar of Christ — is doing about it. Write today for our free pamphlet No. MO-40. It will be sent promptly, without obligation. And nobody will call on you.

Gifts Abound For Yule

By SALLY RYAN
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK -- A sugar plum factory, a leather hippotamus and helpful hints on how to spend a million dollars -- there is something for everyone in the Christmas catalogues this year.

Even Neiman-Marcus, the Texas store with dollar-studded ideas, boggles at the possibilities presented by what is shaping up as a record Christmas spending spree.

The store worked its way through a sheepskin-covered mechanical horse; $150; his and her para-sails - "an amazing, ascending nylon parachute that goes from the surface up" for $361 apiece; a five-foot long rustic wagon with a polyfoam mattress, $145; and pink champagne pancakes, $8.

Then it set out to offer some help on how to tender a little affection--say a million dollars worth. On a woman, of course.

You start with $300 lace handkerchief, thumb through a few baubles such as a $465,000 diamond necklace, the usual sable, chinchilla and limousine, a $450 umbrella with a genuine blonde tortoise handle, a 25-day Aegean cruise with your nine dearest friends, an 18-karat gold needle for $15, and still end up $101,787.38 short of the goal.

"A little loose change to fritter away, in case we've forgotten something," Neiman-Marcus advises.

Stores across the land will be glad to help you fritter away the change. Their Christmas catalogues already are in the mail.

Abercrombie & Fitch Co., the sportsmen's spot in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, opens with Alaskan polar bear skins, "subject to availability," for $975, and has handsewn leather footstools for hunters -- a 68-inch hippo or rhinoceros, $450.

At F.A.O. Schwarz, the Fifth Avenue toy store, there is a lollipop factory, complete with conveyor, cooker, pushbutton automatic ingredient dispenser, mixer, molds and lollipop sticks, $15.

If money is no object, how about:

A Colt Paterson belt pistol, with flared walnut grips and folding trigger, Abercrombie & Fitch, $9,500.

A pointe Milan lace tablecloth, Plummer-McCutcheon, $1,500.

A life-sized tiger, Schwarz, $295.

A seven-room dollhouse with a real electric ceiling light in each room and a stone terrace, Schwarz, $125 unfurnished, $233 furnished.

There are the usual whimsies.

Lord & Taylor, New York Department store, has a thermometer holding a ballpoint pen "for his torrid love letters to you and his irate protests to the papers" $8; and a tipsy musical poodle $9.

Back at Neiman-Marcus, there is a cocktail crutch for incapacitated elbow benders, complete with an ash tray, glass holder, pillbox, key chain, and, ahem, a little black book, $20.

For Republicans, there is a life-sized LBJ beagle, Schwarz $25. "The choice of chief executives," the catalogue says. "Reinforced ears for that presidential lift."

For the horse player, there is an automatic handicap, Abercrombie & Fitch, $6. "Handicapper won't guarantee the winner, but it automatically digests vital statistics, rates every horse in an average race," the catalogue says.

For spies, a toy U2 plane with a camera is perched in the Schwarz catalogue, ready to soar hundreds of feet and take an automatically timed secret picture in flight, $13.95.

The catalogues are loaded with games.

For future statesmen, there is Diplomacy, with a 1914 map of Europe and instructions to try to deal or double deal your way to control of the continent $7.50.

Finally there is "squander," billed as a game for born losers $3.95.

Asks Equality For Emerging Countries

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—A noted visitor from India suggested today the industrial nations of the world must learn to treat the developing nations as fellow citizens.

A U.S. specialist in foreign affairs suggested hard-bitten negotiations between nations which extend financial help and those which receive it.

They stated their ideas in connection with the 10th National Conference of the United States National Commission for UNESCO.

K. S. Sundara of India, an executive director of the World Bank, said many of the developing nations have talent and resources but do not have the the money to develop them.

"My country, one of the poorest, gets about a billion dollars a year in aid from the western world," he said in an interview. "If that were stepped up to 1½ billion, we could be independent of aid in five to seven years.

"It's like the difference between giving a starving man enough to stay alive and giving him enough to get the strength to get up and walk."

He contracted the average income of $3,000 in the United States with $90 in India.

Dr. Luther H. Evans, former director general of UNESCO, made his comment about hard-bitten negotiations in the keynote speech of the conference last night.

He said the problem facing world leaders is to identify the things which need to be done and give a push to social development. He suggested this might be accomplished through negotiations on the terms of foreign aid.

"This would give a high moral standing and aid in the stability of donor-recipient relationships which at best are a bad kind of relationship — easily corruptible and capable of developing bad attitudes," he said.

Dr. Evans is director of the international and legal collections at Columbia University in New York and is a former librarian of Congress. He was director general of UNESCO from 1953 to 1958.

He said the rapidly growing population is one of the toughest problems the world faces and difficulties over trade are certain to arise.

"We are up against starved economic power in its rawest form," he said. "The greedy profit motive will be a great handicap."

Dr. Thomas F. Malone of Hartford, Conn., director of research for Travelers Insurance Co. and past president of the American Geophysical Union, was elected chairman of the commission.

Social Security Stuffers Available

CAPE GIRARDEAU - A small leaflet prepared by the social security administration, is available to employers as a payroll check stuffer. The leaflet explains the increase in the social security contribution rate and amount of earnings on which the tax is paid, set for Jan. 1, Paul J. Palmer, social security district manager in Cape Girardeau, announced today.

The leaflet shows how these increases will affect a worker's take home pay; how his contribution helps finance retirement, survivors, and disability insurance benefits; how they will pay the costs of the hospital insurance part of medicare; and why they are necessary.

Employers may get in touch with the social security district office, located at 612 Broadway, Cape Girardeau, Mo., for more information about the leaflet.

"We can provide employers with a supply of these informative leaflets without charge," Palmer pointed out. "But," he added, "the supply is limited and employers should make their requests early."

Economy Picks up Steam

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy is picking up new strength at the halfway mark in the final quarter of the year.

And the hullaballoo over aluminum prices — even the temporary breakdown of electric power in the industrial Northeast — is likely to add to the tempo on the final weeks of the year — if for no other reason than the rush to catch up after the disruption and uncertainty of the first two weeks of November.

The statistics of the economy seem sure to be fatter at year-end — both in dollar volume — influenced by rising prices--and in unit volume.

Copper prices are going up as supplies tighten. Part of the push behind prices in this metal is from political uproar in production centers in South America and central Africa, forcing world prices higher. Much of the rise in the United States is due to increasing demand for metal.

Steel production is taking a tentative step upward again. It had been lagging since a labor settlement early in September ended fear of a strike. This sent customers to living off of stockpiles built up as a precaution.

Auto production is booming, and so are sales of the new models. Most people see this as assurance that public confidence in good times ahead is strong — and that consumer spending still is free wheeling.

This should assure record retail sales in the weeks just ahead. It's the season of greatest activity for most merchants.

And personal income totals continue to rise. High employment and higher wage scales are helping. There's also a boost from such sidelines as stock dividends. Payments are at a record so far this year. And the first yearend extras signal a record outflow of cash from corporate coffers to shareowners.

Rising prices here and there will give a misleading glow to some of the statistics reckoned in dollars. This inflation, so far mild, colors the reports of the economy in general. But the big boost still is in the actual unit volume — the rising total of goods, the increased number of persons at work.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Do I love Thee?
I fed a hungry lamb today
And helped a lost one find his way.
Do I love Thee?
Once I planted a little tree
Whose future boughs will not shade me.
Do I love Thee?
I prayed with a dying friend tonight
Until he found eternal light.
Yes, I love Thee!
Our live for Thee increases
When we give it away in small pieces.

Sking And Heart Health

By Merritt H. Stiles, M. D.

Dr. Stiles, president of the United States Ski Association from 1961 to 1965, is a former vice president of the American Heart Association and Chairman of its Council on Clinical Cardiology. He makes his home in Spokane, Washington.

If your heart yearns for the highlands at the flutter of the first snowflake, you are not alone. Almost three million Americans took to the ski slopes last season, and the sport's popularity is growing by leaps and slaloms.

While I would not recommend skiing for persons who have a serious heart condition, I do advocate it enthusiastically as a way to keep physically fit. And keeping physically fit helps protect against heart disease.

In fact, I sometimes wonder whether, if everyone started skiing in early childhood, and continued on with skiing or some other strenuous exercise on a year-round basis, there might not be a dramatic drop in the incidence of heart attacks.

The key word here is year-round. The year-round sedentary male who goes in for strenuous exercise on his vacation can get into trouble.

But even if you don't start skiing young, it's still worth a try. I myself only took up skiing at the age of 55. My first ski lessons quickly convinced me that skiing was by far the most enjoyable sport I had ever tried. I soon discovered also that, if I meant to ski actively during the winter, I had to keep in top physical condition the year round. As a result, 10 years later, I am in far better condition than I was at 55 -- all thanks to skiing.

Let me emphasize that you should not undertake a strenuous sport like skiing in middle life without first getting an okay from your doctor. Make a date for a physical examination; it's a good idea even if you change your mind about venturing onto the ski slopes. And remember, your doctor may give you a green light even if you do have some type of heart trouble, provided it is under good control.

Next, get yourself in shape through a conditioning program, best continued year-round. Get suitable equipment and learn how to adjust it; sign up for instruction -- and you're set to go!

If you go from near sea-level to a high altitude ski lodge, take it easy at first -- for a few days if possible -- to acclimate yourself to the thin air and adjust to the high altitude. Remember you will be calling on your heart to work harder than usual supplying oxygen to meet the heavy demands of strenuous exercise. Skiers who leap too abruptly from their sea-level swivel chairs to high altitude ski trails run the risk of developing acute and even dangerous respiratory conditions.

And don't overdo. Skiing, particularly on difficult terrain, when fatigue has impaired timing and coordination, may cause trouble even for the young and vigorous in body and spirit. A recent survey of skiing accidents near Anchorage, Alaska, showed that the highest percentage of injuries occurred in the late afternoon, and that the most "accident-prone" were men under 20. It's wise to stop before you get tired. And it is wise to forestall afternoon fatigue by a midday lunch and rest period.

Now for some specific advice on how to minimize spills and sprains:

1. Get into condition to ski through a planned conditioning program, including stair-climbing, hiking and running.
2. Get equipment that fits properly and learn how to adjust it. Wear non-elastic Arlberg-type safety straps to avoid runaway skis. Beware of loose clothing and long hair when riding lifts or tows, especially rope tows.
3. Skiing does not come naturally. Take lessons from a qualified ski instructor, and continue your lessons at intervals until you have become a competent skier.
4. Pick trails and slopes that match your skills, for safer skiing and more fun.
5. Ride lifts and tows with care. Follow posted instructions.
6. Keep your ski tips up. Carry ski poles by the shaft or with straps in your palm, not over the wrist.
7. Stay clear of the skier ahead. When passing close to another skier, call out: "On your left," or "On your right."
8. When you stop or take a spill, look uphill before you start again. Fill in any holes made by your fall.
9. When skiing into a trail from the side, yield right of way to the skier who is coming down the trail.
10. Keep trails clear. Move to the side when you stop.

If you will follow the skiers' ten commandments faithfully, if you will persevere with your conditioning and instruction programs, you will find the greatest sports enjoyment you have ever known, and you will be doing yourself -- and your heart -- a favor.

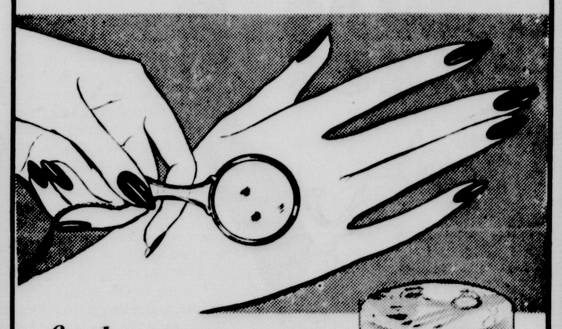

Skier: a person who jumps to contusions.

U.S. Relies On Military Triumph

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — At this stage of the Vietnamese war the United States is counting primarily on military successes rather than diplomatic appeals to persuade North Viet Nam to enter into peace negotiations.

A fresh bid by U.N. Secretary-General U Thant for concessions from all sides in the conflict to promote the prospects for peace failed today to arouse any outward enthusiasm here.

Administration officials said the United States is ready to talk but they see no interest in talks now on the part of the Vietnamese Communist leadership.

The current visit to Moscow by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, a close associate of President Johnson, may produce some U.S. peace approach to the Soviet government. Officials here will not say what — if any — instructions Mansfield had from Johnson on this point.

But they do expect that if Mansfield urges Soviet peace pressures on North Viet Nam, which is receiving Soviet military aid, he also will stress Johnson's determination not to yield South Viet Nam to Communist conquest.

The fact is, however, that U.S. policymakers are generally pessimistic about the outlook for negotiations at this time. They believe the North Vietnamese and guerrilla leaders in South Viet Nam, though their confidence of victory may be shaken, are not yet persuaded they face eventual defeat.

There is some opinion here, moreover, that the war may never end in a negotiated settlement. Those who think this is a serious possibility say that after a time the fighting may simply die down as larger areas come under control of U.S. and South Vietnamese forces. North Viet Nam, according to this theory, could just quietly give up the struggle.

American strategy is now aimed at progressively destroying or wearing down the Communist military forces on the ground in the South and wrecking their morale, while maintaining aerial bombardment of targets in the North. An important new element of this strategy apparently is to press offensive operations against the North Vietnamese regular troops in the South wherever they can be found.

The big battle this week in the Ia Drang Valley of South Viet Nam, near the Cambodian border, is said here to fit into this pattern. U.S. strategists reason that if American and South Vietnamese forces succeed in destroying crack units from North Viet Nam, they will shake the very foundations of Communist confidence and move the conflict closer to conclusion.

The United States now has 160,000 troops in South Viet Nam and is building up to 200,000 as an immediate target with no limit on increases beyond that point.

American military leaders and civilian policymakers have been persuaded for some weeks at least that the weight of American numbers and massive firepower have turned the tide of battle against the Communist forces to the extent that the United States and South Viet Nam are no longer losing the war and may be beginning to win it. Concurrent with this evident change in the military situation there has developed a greater political stability in South Viet Nam.

The situation is roughly the reverse, militarily and diplomatically, of what it was a year ago when Thant advised Washington through then Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson that North Viet Nam was willing to send an emissary to Rangoon, Burma, for a secret meeting with a U.S. representative.

That bid for talks was rejected mainly because the United States felt itself to be in a weak position.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is reported to have decided after studying the Thant report that the North Vietnamese probably were interested in a meeting because they wanted to tell the United States directly that it had to withdraw from South Viet Nam before there could be peace negotiations.

Rusk and other officials are also said to have been concerned about the possibility that the North Vietnamese might use the fact of the talks to undermine morale in South Viet Nam by claiming that the United States was negotiating for peace behind the back of the Saigon government.

But the main consideration in the autumn of 1964 — when Vietnamese policy was involved in the presidential political campaign — is reported to have been that in many ways the United States was in a weak position to go into any kind of talks with North Viet Nam without strong evidence that the enemy was seriously interested in an actual peace settlement.

The situation began to change last February when Johnson ordered the bombing of military targets in North Viet Nam for the avowed purpose of cutting down on the flow of reinforcements and arms to the Communist forces in the South.

The change was speeded up when Johnson subsequently began the massive reinforcement of U.S. troops in South Viet Nam.

Johnson halted the bombing attacks for five days last May. Administration officials said later that word was sent to North Viet Nam that the pause was created deliberately to afford an opportunity for peace probes.

But the Vietnamese neither then nor at any other time during this year's escalation of the war showed any interest in getting into negotiations.

Sears To New Store

Sears, Roebuck and Company's catalog sales store relocates Thursday with a new store in the Midtowner village shopping center. The opening will be at 9 a.m.

The new location will give the store an additional 2,000 square feet of floor space.

The space will permit display samples of additional merchandise.

The new building provides 5,300 square feet of space.

More than half will be devoted to sales and the balance to other facilities, such as the credit department, general offices, storage areas and automotive service shop.

The interior has been painted in pastel shades. Modern lighting and air conditioning are provided to make shopping comfortable.

"The steady growth in Sikeston and surrounding area has demanded that we increase our facilities here and Sears policy of keeping pace with the growth of the cities in which it has stores has lead to this relocation," Clifford Collier, store manager, said. "We hope to provide our customers with faster and more efficient service."

Long and Mrak At Dedication

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Sen Edward V. Long, D-Mo., and Dr. Emil Mrak, chancellor of the University of California's Davis campus, will be the speakers at the Nov. 22 dedication of the University of Missouri Environmental Health Center.

Long will be the luncheon speaker. Mr. Mrak will speak at 2 p.m. in the student union auditorium.

The center will foster university - wide coordination of research and training activities concerned with the relationship of the health of man to his environment.

A bakery co-worker complained it was unfair that he had to pay extra union dues because he was only 18. When I asked what he meant he said, "Look at the bottom of this notice. It says, "If delinquent, add two percent."

Begin Trial of $71,000 Civil Suit

ST. LOUIS -- A federal district court judge Monday began hearing testimony in a $71,000 civil suit growing out of transactions handled by convicted Memphis commodities speculator Landon V. 'Jimmie' Butler of Memphis.

That amount is sought by attorney John D. Hux of Sikeston, receiver for the bankrupt Federal Grain Co., Inc., of Morley, from a New Orleans brokerage firm, Kohlmeyer & Co.

Hux contends Butler engaged in unauthorized and illegal transactions with Kohlmeyer by misappropriation of federal grain funds. The soybean transactions also involved Butler-managed accounts for Best Gin and Land Co. of McMullin, and Henning Tenn., Grain Co., the receiver said.

Federal Judge John K. Regan is hearing the case without a jury.

Butler's attorneys Friday filed a motion with the eighth circuit court of appeals in St. Louis for a stay of his 10-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine, pending an application for a hearing on his conviction before the supreme court.

The eighth circuit court on Nov. 4 denied Butler's motion for a rehearing of that panel's Sept. 16 decision upholding the 52-year-old Memphian's conviction.

Butler has been free on $50,000 bond since a federal district jury at Cape Girardeau found him guilty Nov. 21, 1963, for interstate transportation of stolen grain and of checks stolen, converted or taken by fraud. This grew out of his activities as a federal grain consultant in the fall of 1960.

A fjord is a long narrow arm of the sea extending inland, resulting from the inundation by the sea of a severely glaciated valley. Many fjords are astonishingly deep. Sogne Fjord in Norway is 4,078 feet deep. Messier Channel in Chile is 4,167 feet deep. Fjords are characteristically U-shaped valleys, with the lower, slanting part of the U underwater. Walls of fjords often rise vertically for hundreds of feet from the water's edge.

Geminis to Travel Inches Apart in Space

HOUSTON, Tex. AP -- Gemini 6 and Gemini 7 will travel inches apart on their rendezvous next month if the goal of Manned Spacecraft Center engineers is achieved.

An official who asked not to be named told newsmen Tuesday that the engineers hope the spacecraft will maneuver to one to two feet apart and then fly in formation.

The closest previous figure used by spokesmen for the center was 10 feet.

Gemini 7, a 14-day mission, is scheduled for launch Dec. 4. Nine days later, on Dec. 13, Gemini 6 will be launched into the same orbit.

Gemini 6, a two-day mission, was postponed Oct. 25 when a rendezvous pod failed to orbit.

Legislatures Do Poor Job Remapping

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A Virginia educator Tuesday called state legislatures "the most inappropriate of all bodies" to reapportion themselves because they have too much self interest to do a good job.

Paul T. David, chairman of the University of Virginia department of government and foreign affairs, told a workshop at the National Municipal League that a relatively small state constitutional convention with its members elected by the state at large should do the redistricting.

He also suggested redistricting should be "as nearly automatic as possible" and subject to judicial review by state and federal courts.

St. Louis County Supervisor Lawrence Roos told another session that local officials must make sacrifices in public apathy, which holds back successful intergovernmental cooperaton, is to be overcome.

"Most people just don't give a hoot until something breaks down," he said. Local officials, he said, must give up certain prerogatives in the interest of better area wide government.

Roos also called on state legislatures to give local government a greater degree of home rule.

During an inspection at Fort Dix, New Jersey, a lieutenant discovered a young GI's laundry bag full of books. Since he was a stickler for having everything in its proper place, the lieutenant dressed down the guilty private in grand style. When he was just about out of breath, he demanded, "By any stretch of the imagination can you justify having your laundry bag full of books?"

"Yes," the private said. "They're dirty books, sir."

According to the system as designated by the highway board and approved by Secretary Jardine, Sikeston is located at the intersection of two of these national highways. One of them is No. 61, a route extending from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico and the other Federal highway, passing through Sikeston is No. 62, of which State Highway No. 16 is a part.

State Highway Commission Approves 1966 Highway Oiling Program

At its November meeting in Jefferson City, the Missouri State Highway Commission gave its approval for oil surface treatment to 1,189.8 miles of Secondary (farm to market) system routes during the summer months of calendar 1966. These improvements will extend into all sections of the state and will cost an estimated $2,141,640.

This 1966 oiling program furthers the State Highway Commission's effort to provide additional "dust-free" surface highways for Missouri highway users.

The work includes sections with an average daily traffic count of 70 or more vehicles per day, a decrease from this year's requirement of 75 vehicles, along with a few gaps and short isolated gravel sections.

The actual application of the oil treatment to the routes will not be done until next spring and summer since this type of improvement is a warm weather operation. The Department's district maintenance crews, however, will during the winter months prepare the roads by grading, ditch cleaning, stabilization work, etc., so that the actual application of oil can move forward at the earliest possible time next year.

Routes scheduled to receive oil surface treatment during 1966 by district, county, route, mileage and location includes:

DISTRICT 10, SIKESTON

BOLLINGER: Route 0 -- 3.1 miles from Route A north to present oil; and Route VV--2.3 miles from Route M, north.

CAPE GIRARDEAU: Route U--3.5 miles from Route N north to present oil; Route 00--4.2 miles from Route HH south to present oil; Route F--1.2 miles from Route Z to Route PP; Outer Road -- 0.2 mile at Interstate Route 55 and Route 74; and Outer Road -- 0.7 mile at Interstate Route 55, U. S. Route 61 and Route 34.

MADISON: Route C-- 2 miles from Route FF west to Iron county; Route E--6.1 miles from Route T southwest to present oil; and Route MM -- 1.2 miles from 72, north.

MISSISSIPPI: Route KK - 2.1 miles from Route JJ, south; and Outer Road -- 1.2 miles at Interstate Route 57 and Route B.

NEW MADRID: Route U -- 1.6 miles for balance of Route.

PEMISCOT: Outer Road --0.7 mile at Interstate Route 55 and Route D.

STODDARD: Route BB-- 4.2 miles from Route K to Route M; and Route 00 -- 4 miles from Route 25, east.

WAYNE: Route Z -- 13.9 miles from Route D to Route P; Route FF -- 3 miles from Route U southeast to Kyles; Route V--7.9 miles for balance of route; and Route BB-- 5.3 miles from Route D, south.

THE ART OF BUYING MEAT

Knowing the correct way to buy meat is important for any group of consumers, but most of all for low - income groups. They cannot afford -- either economically or nutritionally - to neglect such an important part of their diets and budgets.

Catherine Nawn, marketing specialist with the Livestock Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service gives the following tips on how to stretch meat dollars by using U.S. grade names.

Beef is chosen for cut and purpose as well as by grade.

For instance, if a pot roast is planned, there is no need to buy a top grade cut. A lower grade chuck roast, say U.S. Good, properly prepared can be tender, flavorful and just as nutritious as a Choice grade one, and it will be less expensive.

Prime and Choice grades are fine for steaks or special occasion meals, but they are economically out of reach of most low-income families. The lower grades are less expensive, and when prepared properly, can be tender and juicy. U.S. Good, Standard, and Commercial, for use in stewing, in ground meat dishes and other casserole meals can make mighty good eating.

As guidelines to quality, USDA grades assure the consumer his best meat buy. If used in a practical program of meat purchasing, these grades can prove invaluable to the low-income consumer.

Asks Transfer To Work on Appeal

TOPEKA (AP)—George Gessner, a former soldier convicted of passing nuclear secrets to Russia, is seeking transfer from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth to the Johnson County, Kan., jail on the grounds he would be better able to work with his attorney in preparing an appeal.

Vance Collins, U. S. marshal for Kansas, testified in U.S. District Court Tuesday that his office had elected to keep Gessner at Leavenworth for the prisoner's own safety and because of top secret information in Gessner's mind.

Collins said it was felt Gessner should be protected from other prisoners because they look down on a man who has betrayed his country.

In an appearance before the court last week, Gessner charged he had been physically assaulted by guards in the penitentiary. He said that on one occasion his clothes were ripped off him by prison guards and that he was thrown into a "stripped" cell. He said a bruise on his arm had been inflicted by a guard on Nov. 2.

The hearing was on a habeas corpus action by Gessner, asking that the court order him to be held at a county jail pending outcome of his appeal from a life sentence for turning atomic secrets over to the Russian embassy in Mexico City.

Officials said Gessner has elected not to begin serving his sentence pending outcome of his appeal. As a result, he is technically in custody of the marshal's office.

Judge George Templar reserved ruling on the motion and asked attorneys to prepare suggested findings of fact to aid in reaching a decision.

Sinatra Gets Off Easy

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — From the preliminary skirmishes, one might have concluded that CBS in its documentary program on Frank Sinatra had a tiger in its schedule. When seen Tuesday night, however, it emerged as a nice little pussycat of a show.

Sinatra came off as talented, hard-working, generous, warm, family-loving, rich, responsible, witty and loyal. In portions of an interview with Walter Cronkite -- the one he had sought to have withdrawn from the program -- he explained that his reputation for a quick temper and ready fists related only to one incident in which he was provoked to action.

He complained, without apparent bitterness, about "ridiculous accusations and statements that I was consorting with mobsters and gangsters."

The well-publicized Sinatra romances were glossed over. His first wife, Nancy, appeared with him in some recent film. Mia Farrow's name was mentioned but once — by Sinatra to illustrate his problems with the press. It was in connection with a magazine picture showing them together, with Sinatra making a gesture, which, he said, was misinterpreted by a caption writer.

There were a few suggestions that Sinatra might have a few faults. At one point Cronkite said "he has often done things only an understanding friend would forgive," but no understanding friend appeared to supply chapter and verse.

The strongest criticism of the singer came from his daughter, Nancy: "When you have a daddy, you kind of want him to be a daddy all the time. And sometimes, when he's with his friends, they carry on like a bunch of kids. And it's great they're having a marvelous time, but that bothers me a little."

We saw daddy and his friends having a marvelous time doing a benefit performance. Cronkite explained it was just part of their appeal — making the audience feel that what Sammy Davis, Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra were doing on stage to amuse them were the same things they do off-stage to amuse each other.

The program was interesting enough as a sketch but it dug no deeper than an article in a fan magazine and it is certainly hard to figure out why Sinatra got the wind up about the show. He came out of it looking about the size of Paul Bunyan.

A crowd had gathered outside the cage of the mother orangutan and her new baby at New York's Central Park Zoo. Each time the tiny monkey tried to climb about the cage, the mother nonchalantly reached out with one of her paws and pulled the baby back.

"Just look at that big ape!" one woman said to her friend. "Doesn't she have a contented look on her face?"

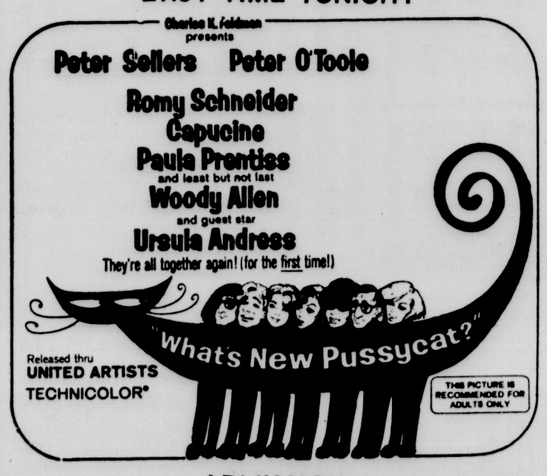

"Why shouldn't she?" her friend retorted. "She's got what every mother would like to have -- four arms!"

25-Year Service In R.E.A.

JEFFERSON CITY -- James C. Stephenson, Vernon Buck and DeWint Zaricor were honored Thursday night at the 28th annual membership meeting of the Missouri State Rural Electrification Association.

The Scott-New Madrid-Mississippi Electric Cooperative employes received certificates recognizing their completion of 25-years service in the rural electric program in Missouri.

These certificates, presented at the annual meeting banquet at which Sen. Edward V. Long spoke, read:

"In recognition of 25 years of dedicated service to the rural electrification program."

Stephenson, manager, lives at 314 Kramer Drive, Sikeston. Zaricor, assistant manager, lives at 501 South New Madrid, Sikeston. Buck, line superintendent, lives at 333 East Kathleen, Sikeston.

Stephenson has completed 29 years in the R. E. A. program beginning on survey work building lines in 1936 at Palmyra, and has had continuous employment in R. E. A. since.

Zaricor began working for his father, former manager of the Sikeston R. E. A., in 1940. He has worked 25 years for the R. E. A. in different assignments since 1940, with the exception of time spent in the South Pacific during World War II as a fighter pilot in the air corps.

Buck, line superintendent for 18 years, has worked in different jobs from groundman to lineman to line foreman to line superintendent with time out only for World War II service in Germany.

Crisis Atmosphere Vanishes from Ike

FT. GORDON, Ga. (AP) — Most of the atmosphere of crisis has — like the oxygen tent — vanished from around Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Both could return. But as of Tuesday the former president was portrayed as putting in a relatively active day for a 75-year-old man only a week past a heart attack.

The five-star general was described by an Army spokesman as reading Westerns, chatting with his wife and aides, and signing and dictating a few letters.

Doctors disclosed that the general had not been under oxygen since sometime Saturday. He had been in and out of the tent intermittently.

The oxygen tent may be as much symbolic as an actual measure of the general's progress. Eisenhower has resorted to bottled oxygen off and on since his 1955 heart attack at Denver. He even carried the equipment in his car when traveling.

There were other signs of relaxing tensions.

The ranks of the small army of newsmen, photographers and radio and television technicians have thinned out.

Maj. Gen. Walter B. Richardson, commander of the fort which has thrown its resources in to help the general in his battle, was able to take some time out to give a lecture to newsmen on the fort's normal role in training soldiers.

A sergeant who had seemed to live in rumpled fatigues ever since Eisenhower was brought to the hospital here a week ago showed up Tuesday night decked out in a blue blazer sport coat and white shirt for an evening off.

So far there has been no reported effort by the doctors to have the former president sit up or get out of his bed a couple hundreds yards from the Ft. Gordon golf course.

The Eisenhower family hopes to be together for Thanksgiving at Washington's Walter Reed Army Hospital. But the doctors said Tuesday they have no plans yet for transferring Eisenhower to the hospital in the capital.

Longest Mountain Range

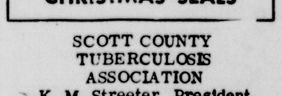

World's longest mountain range is a submarine ridge called the Mid-Atlantic Cordillera. The range, covered by water averaging a mile in depth, stretches 10,000 miles and separates the Atlantic Ocean into eastern and western basins.

The Puritans may not have been as puritanical as is sometimes thought. They feasted for three days on the first Thanksgiving Day in 1621 . . . although they included prayers in the celebration.

American Football League Reschedules Player Draft

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The wheeling and dealing has started but it looks like this year's crop of college football stars will have to wait at least until Nov. 27 to begin their post-graduate courses in economics.

Or will they?

Strongly criticized by college coaches and officials across the country and faced with the possibility of a boycott by some college conferences, the American Football League backtracked Tuesday night and rescheduled its player draft for Nov. 27, the same day the National League will hold its draft.

The AFL had planned to draft on Nov. 20 and get a week's jump on buttonholing its prospects and protecting them from the NFL's so-called "baby-sitting tactics," which the younger league claimed had kept its clubs from reaching and signing draft choices.

But there were recurring reports that the AFL had jumped the gun on its original Nov. 2(date and already held a secret draft.

The Dallas Times Herald, Atlanta Journal and New York Daily News all reported that the AFL clubs had met and divided up the college stars and one AFL executive, Gerald H. Phipps, president of the Denver Broncos, disclosed that the owners had gathered in New York two weeks ago, "not for any secret draft, but to learn as much as we could about the draft prospects."

Wayne Valley, co-owner of the Oakland Raiders, also said that the AFL owners had met informally two weeks ago and added:

"I know the NFL is meeting today (Tuesday) in Pittsburgh. I don't know what they're doing, but I imagine they're discussing the probability and acceptibility of various players with the various teams in their league. This is what we did a couple of weeks ago."

There was no immediate comment from any NFL source to Valley's comment.

Commissioner Joe Foss, who announced the AFL decision to delay its draft one week, emphatically denied the reports of a premature draft and implied the story was planted by the rival NFL.

"It's an annual affair for them to break such a story, and it always comes out of National League cities.

"There has never been anything to the story in the past and there is nothing to it again this time. It's entirely false, without a word of truth," Foss said.

The pro leagues have no signed agreement with the National Collegiate Athletic Association on draft dates, but the NCAA had strongly urged that they draft no earlier than Nov. 27, final playing date for most college teams.

The AFL had justified its Nov. 20 date by claiming that last year NFL scouts had resorted to "baby-sitting tactics" to keep prospects away from the younger loop.

Foss, in his statement announcing the change in dates, said the AFL had decided to draft early "to combat this questionable practice, which has involved the hiding out of dozens of college players in order to prevent AFL teams from negotiating with them.

Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the NFL when asked to comment on Foss' statement, said:

"The AFL has breached the public trust and that of the nation's colleges with secret early drafts at least three times in the past five years, including one earlier this month. The NFL developed a program of field representatives to minimize the number of premature signings resulting from such unethical drafts.

"We do not feel required to further defend a recruiting program simply because it is more straightforward, better organized and effective than the practices employed by our competition."

DUFFY'S DUO—There are many reasons why Duffy Daugherty's Michigan State Spartans are enjoying a fine season, including fullback Bob Apisa, left, and quarterback Steve Juday.

Big 8 Football

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Walt Garrison, Oklahoma State's rugged fullback, made his bid for another Big Eight rushing championship the hardest way possible, with a 121-yard gain against unbeaten Nebraska.

Garrison almost won the game with an 18-yard bolt to the Husker 5 on the final play, and Bob Devaney, Nebraska coach, called him "the best fullback I've ever seen in the Big Eight."

His big game put Garrison within range of Missouri's Charlie Brown, who lifted his league-leading total to 779 with 96 against Oklahoma. Brown leads by 104 yards, but the catch is, Brown has one game left against Kansas while Garrison has two, K-State and Oklahoma.

Garrison needs 208 yards in his last two games to join the Big Eight's select list of backs with 2,000 yards rushing for a career. This means 104 yards a game, but don't count him out. He has averaged almost 106 his last four games. He won the crown with 730 last year.

Tim Van Galder of Iowa State took over the Big Eight passing lead with 1,163 yards and the total offense lead at 1,342 with his 344 run-pass yards against K-State, the second highest in league history.

Colorado's Bernie McCall is second in passing with 1,032 and in total offense at 1,269. Fred Duda of Nebraska is third with 924 total offense.

Other rushing leaders are William Harris of Colorado 638, Frank Solich of Nebraska 574, Harry Wilson of Nebraska 512, Carl Reese of Missouri 479, Les Webster of Iowa State 459 and Ron Kirkland of Nebraska 450.

In pass receiving, Nebraska's Freeman White has 458 on 28 catches, six for touchdowns; Eppie Barney of Iowa State 411 and Tom Busch of Iowa State 359 on 23.

Missouri's Gary Lane tied Frank Rogers of Colorado for the scoring lead at 48 points. Lane also moved within 12 yards of 3,000 career total offense, reached by only seven players in conference history.

Other leaders are Larry Wachholtz of Nebraska, 442 in punt runbacks; Ossie Cain of K-State, 349 in kickoff returns and Bill Lynch of Kansas, 42.3 punting average.

In the team figures, Nebraska still leads in rushing offense at 285.1 to Missouri's 240.6; in total offense, 403.2 to Colorado's 301.1, in rushing defense 104 to Missouri's 115.3 and total defense, 199.8 to Colorado's 231.5. Van Galder's spree moved Iowa State to the lead in pass offense at 129.2 yards a game. In pass defense, Iowa State also leads.

Around the Big Eight training camps, Missouri coach Dan Devine was worried about the flu and Kansas coach Jack Mitchell about injuries.

Four Missouri players have the 24-hour flu, three of them offensive left guards, headed by starter Mike Eader. The coach fears it may spread. Russ Washington, big end, took the cast off his knee, but he's questionable.

Mitchell said several of his injured men may be able to play a little in the 74th annual battle "but I wonder how long they'll last?"

K-State tackle Willie Jones is doubtful for Oklahoma State. Colorado is in good condition for Air Force and Iowa State is ready for New Mexico. Nebraska and Oklahoma have an open date Saturday.

Bowl Roundup

Conference championship showdowns Saturday in the Southwest and Far West will fill vacancies in at least two -- and probably three -- of college football's major bowl games.

The bowl picture, which began to take shape with commitments by third-ranked Nebraska Orange, No. 8 Missouri Sugar and Georgia Tech Gator last weekend and top-ranked Michigan State's formal Big Ten send-off to the Rose Bowl Tuesday, could be virtually completed after this week's games.

The host berths in the Cotton and Rose classics will be on the line when second-ranked Arkansas takes on No. 9 Texas Tech at Little Rock for the SWC title and Southern California, No. 6, tackles UCLA, No. 7, at Los Angeles for the Pacific Athletic Conference championship.

The SWC runner-up is assured of a Gator Bowl invitation, with Texas Tech having already made a conditional acceptance.

The only remaining openings are single spots in the Cotton, Sugar and Orange bowls -- and fifth-ranked Alabama appears to have a lock on the Orange berth opposite Nebraska. Southeastern Conference stalwarts Tennessee, Kentucky, Auburn, LSU and Florida all are possibilities for the Cotton and Sugar bowls and Syracuse also has been mentioned.

"If we can stand up to him, all Europe will be free. . . Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duty, and so bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men will say, "This was their finest hour.' "

Rickey In Coma

COLUMBIA, Mo. - The coma into which Branch Rickey lapsed when he had a heart attack is in its fourth day.

The Boone County Memorial Hospital reported his condition unchanged and still critical today.

The 83-year-old organizing genius of major league baseball collapsed Saturday night at the speaker's stand as he acknowledged his election to Missouri's Sports Hall of Fame.

He has not regained consciousness and has been in the intensive care section since his arrival at the hospital.

Wilt Chamberlain

Wilt Chamberlain, the $100,000 star of the Philadelphia 76ers, can reach another milestone in his fabulous pro basketball career at Cincinnati tonight.

The 7-foot-1 Big Dipper, as he prefers to be called, needs to score 33 points against the Royals to become the second highest scorer in National Basketball Association history.

Now in his seventh NBA season, Chamberlain has a career total of 19,217 points, 32 short of the 19,249 Dolph Schayes tallied in his 16 NBA seasons. Schayes now is coach of the 76ers.

Bob Pettit of the St. Louis Hawks, who retired after last season, his 11th in the NBA, is the league's No. 1 all-time scorer with 20,880 points.

Chamberlain closed in on Schayes' total with 30 points Tuesday night as he rallied the 76ers to a 107-98 victory over St. Louis, their fifth straight. New York routed Detroit 120-95 to snap a four-game losing streak in the other game of the double-header at New York's Madison Square Garden.

John Havlicek's 20-foot jump shot in the last 15 seconds gave the Boston Celtics a come-from-behind 108-105 victory.

Accounted For 85 Deer

Eighty-five deer were accounted for at the Poplar Bluff checking station of the Missouri Conservation Commission at the close of hunting hours yesterday.

The opening day total included 60 bucks and 25 does, according to Conservation Agent Chester D. Barnes who supervises the checking of deer here. The checking station is operating at the Poplar Bluff District Ranger Station of the Clark National Forest, located on Highway 67, north, at Maude street.

A total of 3,976 whitetailed deer were reported killed by hunters over the state Monday, opening day of the week-long gun season. The total was 1,503 less than on the first day of the season last year.

The kill included 2,762 bucks and 1,214 does. On the same day last season, hunters killed 3,507 bucks and 1,972 does.

The Conservation Commission said the lower total apparently stemmed from a change in regulations in many northern Missouri counties whereby bucks only are legal this season, whereas any deer was legal last year.

Benton County in west central Missouri had 247 kills Monday to lead the state. Texas County, in the deep southern Missouri Ozarks, was next with 189, and Ozark County, further south, recorded 175.

Death Claims Famed Magician HarryBlackstone

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The era of great enchanters who made millions thrill, wonder and gasp in amazement drew closer to its end with the death of famed magician Harry Bickstone.

The man whom many in the theater world called "the last of the great magicians" died at his home Tuesday night at 82. He had been bedridden since August with pulmonary edema.

His death ended a 60-year career in what Blackstone termed the science of misdirection. "Magic overcomes frustration," the spellbinder once said. "It doesn't need to be sleight of hand. It's nothing but pure psychology - applied in the right place."

Born Harry Bouton in Chicago, he turned professional at 16, forming the Bouton Brothers act with his younger brother Peter.

The cast grew until, during the 1920s, he commanded a cast of about 40. Blackstone's career reached its height during World War II, when millions of servicemen took in his show at the U.S.O.

Blackstone retired six years ago, returning once to the public eye in the television show "This Is Your Life." Four years ago he moved from New York to California.

He leaves his widow, Elizabeth, 65; a son, Harry Jr., and his brother, Peter Bouton, of Colon, Mich.

Captain Says He Last Off Ship

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The Greek captain of the Yarmouth Castle says he left his sinking ship in a lifeboat, but returned to help the passengers and was the last person off.

Of his crew, many of whom had criticized him, Capt. Byron Voutsinas, 33, said:

"They did everything possible, even giving their own lifejackets to passengers.

"That means you give your life to someone you have never seen and will never see again. They were a brave crew."

The Coast Guard added four names to the list of those missing, raising the toll to 85 passengers and two crewmen missing and one man known dead in the disaster that struck the Yarmouth Castle, full of Nassau-bound vacationers. The vessel, carrying 550 passengers and crew, burned and sank about 60 miles northwest of her destination.

Cmdr. George Treffs of the Coast Guard added to the missing list Florence and Joseph Wright of Pompano Beach, Fla., and Pauline and Warren Tomasini of San Luis Obispo, Calif.

Voutsinas, who had made no public statement since his ship went down Saturday, appeared at a news conference Tuesday.

He said: "The condition of the ship was perfect. It had all the (safety) equipment and it all worked perfectly.

"I did not see anyone abandon ship by himself; they (crew members) were helping passengers. Everybody did what they were supposed to do."

Nine Killed in Crash Of Turkish Air Force Craft

ISTANBUL AP -- A Turkish air force C47 transport crashed near Ankara Tuesday night, killing all nine occupants.

Officials said the cause of the crash was not immediately determined.

The plane had taken off from Diyarbakir, in southeastern Turkey, with five army passengers and a crew of four. It crashed shortly after receiving landing instructions from the Ankara control tower.

PARIS AP -- France's presidential race lost a candidate today, but another filed just before the list closed Tuesday night. The field still stands at six.

Paul Antier, a supporter of agricultural interests, said he felt there were too many candidates and withdrew.

The new candidate was Marcel Barbu, 58, a former member of Parliament. He has no well-defined political learnings.

President Charles de Gaulle is considered certain to win.

LONDON (AP) — Unemployed truck driver Kempton Bunton doesn't think it's right that Britons should have to pay 5 pounds ($14) a year for a television license to support the BBC.

So he took a $392,000 Goya portraint of the Duke of Wellington from the National Gallery and said for nearly four years he tried to ransom it to buy television licenses for the poor and needy.

Last May he tipped off a London newspaper that the painting was in a railway station checkroom. Police found it undamaged. Bunton, 61, turned himself in two months later.

A jury found him innocent Tuesday of stealing the painting because he intended to return it. But it found him guilty of stealing the picture's frame which he had abandoned in a rooming house. Judge Carol Aarvold sentenced him to three months in jail.

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP)— U.S. Ambassador Edward Clark turned the first sod today for a rose garden to be built in an Adelaide suburb as a memorial to the late President John F. Kennedy.

French Tell Of Viet Nam Peace Offer

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) — News commentator David Schoenbrun says he was informed by a ranking French government official that the North Vietnamese offered to begin unconditional peace talks with the United States during last spring's six-day moratorium on bombing in North Viet Nam.

The offer, Schoenbrun quoted the official as saying, was contained in a message sent to the French government in Paris on the fourth day of the letup in bombing. It directed the French to tell the United States that North Viet Nam was ready to talk about a cease-fire and a peace settlement in South Viet Nam, he said.

Schoenbrun said the United States ignored the overture and resumed bombing raids on strategic points in North Viet Nam.

The U.S. moratorium went into effect May 12 for the avowed purpose of opening the door to possible peace talks. Bombing was resumed on May 18.

Schoenbrun, former Columbia Broadcasting System chief European correspondent based in Paris and London, made his remarks before a conference of bankers Tuesday night.

Reached afterward, Schoenbrun said he understood the offer was one of three advanced by Hanoi since last November. The first one, he said, came three weeks before the presidential election and the second two weeks afterward.

Star-spangled security

The millions of Americans who buy U. S. Savings Bonds know security is a two-way street.

You and your family are only as secure as the country you live in. When you start saving with U. S. Bonds you insure your own future and help keep your country strong at the same time.

Bonds give you a guaranteed rate of interest—3¾% when held to maturity—so you don't have to worry about the ups and downs of market trends.

And Savings Bonds aren't subject to state or local income taxes, either. If you like, you can defer the federal income tax until you cash your Bonds.

When you buy your Bonds you can't help feeling a little proud. You're doing your part in strengthening the cause of freedom.

And that's the best security in the world.

Overrun by Viet Cong

DA NANG, South Viet Nam AP -- A Viet Cong battalion overran a government district headquarters 28 miles south of Da Nang today and Vietnamese sources said casualties among the 150-man garrison were heavy.

The Viet Cong were reported to have left several victims impaled on stakes. A government official who flew over the headquarters said he saw no sign of life.

About 500 Communists attacked the headquarters, at Hiep Duc.

It was not known whether U. S. Army advisers were in the headquarters at the time. However, most government - held district towns have advisory teams of five Americans.

Suedekum Oran's Man Of Year

ORAN - Clarence Suedekum, presiding judge of Cape County Court and acting chairman of the Cape Girardeau Chamber of Commerce Wholesale and Manufacturing Committee, presented the Community Leadership Award to Liston Mitchell Jr. at a meeting of the Oran Chamber of Commerce Monday night.

Mitchell, named the Man of the Year, has been active here in the Little League, the chamber and the Oran Park Board.

He helped plan the Oran Homecoming and is now serving as the president of the Lions Club.

Mitchell was born in Jackson, was graduated from Sikeston High School and worked in credit companies in Sikeston and St. Louis before coming here to work as an assistant cashier at the Oran State Bank.

Oran is one of 10 cities cooperating with the Cape Girardeau chamber's awards program. Similar trophies will be presented in Jackson, Benton, Dexter, Illmo-Scott City, Advance, Marble Hill, Lutesville, Chaffee, Bloomfield and Delta.

A committee of judges from each of these cities will select their Man of the Year on outstanding characteristics in civic affairs.

Our neighbor has six lively sons, and her yard is always filled with youngsters active in ball games, bike races or fistfights. One day her older boys set us a lemonade stand. The sign over the stand read: "Help Send These Boys To Camp." I suspect the whole neighborhood looked forward to the boys' vacation. Anyway, business boomed. But their mother was harder pressed than ever, her kitchen a mess of spilled sugar and lemon peels. The second morning she was out on a stepladder, changing the sign to read: "Help! Send These Boys To Camp!"

Collins Out On Bond

CARUTHERSVILLE -- James Collins, 36, Caruthersville truck driver who has been held in Pemiscot County Jail since August 27 on a charge of murder by rape, has been released on a $25,000 bond approved by Circuit Court Judge William A. Ragland.

Collins was arrested following the death of Sue Melton, 23, of Memphis, Tenn., who was found on the Triangle Boat Club road the night of August 20 by a Caruthersville couple. Witnesses testified at the hearing that they had seen Collins leaving the Climax Bar with the woman earlier that evening.

Prosecuting Attorney Sharon J. Pate filed charges of murder by rape against him on August 27. Pate reported to a Daily Democrat staff writer Monday that the bond had been made for Collins and he had been released.

Pate expressed his opinion that "the bond is not good." He said it was made out by the S & G Bonding Co. and carried the signatures of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gatewood, Caruthersville tavern owners, and Paul (Duke) Still of Steele. He explained that the initials in the bonding company name stood for the last name initials of Still and Gatewood.

Pate also reported that Sheriff Clyde Orton had returned to Collins his automobile which played an important role in the case of the state against the defendant because it contained material evidence needed to prove the guilt of Collins.

The trial date of the Collins case has not been set, according to information released by Pate.

An advertising agency with a cigarette account discovered a man in the Tennessee hills who had been smoking for 90 years. Since the veteran's 105th birthday was coming up, the agency sent a man South to explore the possibility of an endorsement.

"Ever been to New York?" the agency representative asked.

"Nope, but always meant to go."

"Ever been up in a jet plane?"

"Nope, Sounds like fun."

"Ever thought of staying at the Waldorf?"

"Say, that sounds right fine."

"Well," said the adman, "you and I are getting on a jet for New York. We'll put you in the best suite at the Waldorf, and on your birthday I'll call for you at nine and drive you to the studio. At ten a.m. sharp you'll be on television. What do you think of that!"

"Can't do it. Wouldn't be right.

"Why not?" cried the agency man.

"I don't stop coughing till noon."

Splinters Abound In Political Parties

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's more than just a wild and woolly time. It's a hodge-podge, left and right.

"Real squares. Old ladies up in the Bronx."

That's what some young radicals today call members of the American Communist party. The weekly newspaper, the National Observer, which quoted them, said they are equally contemptuous of liberals and labor unions.

But Monday the party thought it got a shot in the arm and talked of running candidates for office. But George Lincoln Rockwell, commander of the American Nazi party, has already said he will run for president in 1972.

The Ku Klux Klan is in business. The ultraconservative Minutemen talk of their secret "underground army."

Robert Welch, founder of the right-wing John Birch Society, says of the United States: "It's "one vast insane asylum" where "they've let out the worst patients to run the place."

The Communist party has splinter groups. Student groups have splinter groups. Even the Republican party has splinters.

But long after thousands of today's young radicals sag into middle age, raising families and buying homes between trips to the bank, the Communist party will probably be still here.

At least it has an ideology, although it changes with the wind, while many and probably most of the young radicals have only upset emotions and incoherence.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover considers the Communist party a "Moscow-controlled" menace and part of an international Communist conspiracy. He called Gus Hall, the party's chief spokesman, "Moscow-trained."

It was Hall who Monday, after a Supreme Court decision, got the idea that now the party could run candidates, although its claimed membership has dropped from perhaps 100,000 in the 1930s to 10,000 now.

The court held unconstitutional a provision requiring a party member to register as such with the federal government.

This was the reasoning: For failure to register he could be prosecuted and jailed. But if he did register, he could be prosecuted under another law which makes it a crime to belong to a group that advocates overthrowing the government.

Thus, if he registered, he would be risking incriminating himself under the other law. The court pointed out that under the Constitution's Fifth Amendment a man can't be compelled to incriminate himself.

In the 1930s — although the Communist party's part in it was very small — the great domestic crusade was to organize workers into unions. They joined in the millions.

Earlier this month, in a special story on the radical left among the young, the New York Times, picking out the Students for a Democratic Society as the "largest single radical student group on or around campuses," said that the SDS had "pretty much given up the working class as lost, having fallen prey to the union and the Democratic party." The Times says SDS claims 3,000 members, with 90 chapters around the country.

The National Observer, not limiting itself to student groups, said the new left places less emphasis on economic problems, more on "human freedom," and only a few splinter groups try to "out-Mao Mao Tze-tung."

Yet, the newspaper went on, "even a tiny splinter group possesses the capacity for mischief if it also possesses dynamite." Some groups are on a crusade against poverty and the war in Viet Nam.

FBI's Hoover says "the Communist party is today expending tremendous energy attempting to increase its influence among college students."

Missouri Press Report From Edward Long

Congress this year voted approval for programs which will help Missouri strengthen its outdoor recreational facilities.

At final count, Congressional appropriations to Missouri for outdoor recreation, fisheries and wildlife, and national parks totaled $8,841,213.

Missouri won a total of $5,444,492 for projects in the Clark National Forest, the Mark Twain National Forest and the new Ozark National Scenic Riverway.

Congress approved Missouri activities of the U. S. Department of Interior's Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife. This Bureau aids in provision of fish hatcheries, wildlife refuges, soil and moisture conservation, wildlife research and river basin studies. These activities won a total of $777,140 for fiscal year 1966.

Missouri's National Park Service areas won $752,050 in funds to expand and improve their outdoor recreation facilities. The George Washington Carver National Monument, the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, the Wilson's Creek Battlefield National Park, and the Ozark Scenic National Riverway are each included.

Altogether Congress voted over $4,000,000 to launch the new Ozark National Scenic Riverway. The Riverway includes 81,000 acres in Carter, Dent, Shannon, and Texas counties. This Riverway is a welcome addition to Missouri's beautiful outdoor recreation areas.

Missouri servicemen in Viet Nam will have fruitcake for Christmas this year thanks to "Operation Fruitcake" sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Downtown St. Louis.

A fruitcake will be sent by the club as a Christmas gift to all Missouri boys in Viet Nam whose names are sent in to my St. Louis office:

Senator Edward V. Long
Room 4039
Federal Office Building
1520 Market Street
St. Louis, Missouri

All parents, wives and relatives of servicemen in Viet Nam are urged to send in names and addresses. The Department of Defense has assured me that if the names and addresses are sent in promptly to my office, the fruitcakes will be delivered in time for Christmas.

President Johnson signed a bill to eliminate the red tape forced on lawyers who want to represent citizens before Federal regulatory agencies.

This bill, which I introduced in the Senate, sweeps away cumbersome and confusing regulations for attorneys practicing before Federal agencies. Also untangled by the law are the regulations under which Certified Public Accountants appear in behalf of taxpayers before the Internal Revenue Service.

Under this new law, citizens will be saved needless expense. It will also save time for lawyers, accountants, and Federal agencies.

Proposed Time Zones

In 1883, William Allen proposed a system of standard time. His idea, first accepted by railwaymen in Canada and the United States, resulted in designating American time zones as Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific, with the time in each being one hour slower than its predecessor.

Another Victim of Ratings

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Another victim of the ratings game quietly bit the television dust Monday. It will be mourned, partly for what it tried to bring to television but mostly for what will take its place.

The program scheduled for extinction is a high-minded interview show, ABC's "The Young Set." At an hour — 11 a.m. EST to noon — when the two rival networks are filled with soap opera and reruns of old Dick Van Dyke and Andy Griffith shows. Moderator Phyllis Kirk tried valiantly and often successfully to provide intelligent opinion and stimulating conversation.

Miss Kirk, whose television comedy series, "The Thin Man" is still playing around the country, brought together specialists and personalities ranging from dog trainers to Dick Gregory. This reporter once tuned in on a session in which a Protestant Episcopal bishop, a Catholic priest and an agnostic were in civilized and enlightening conversation.

"The Young Set" dies Dec. 17 and on Dec. 20 will be replaced by two half-hour game shows.

One, called "Supermarket Sweepstakes," will feature women bidding on items in stores. The winners will then be turned loose in a self-service store to scoop up as much merchandise as possible within a time limit.

The second, "Dating Game," will present eligible spinsters and bachelors after some sort of a computerized selection process.

CBS' "What's My Line?" producers have no immediate plans to replace the late Dorothy Kilgallen on the panel. For the next few weeks, at least, her spot will be filled by what producers Goodson and Todman call "members of the G-T family" — Betty White, Peggy Cass, Kitty Carlisle and Bess Myerson among them.

Recommended tonight: "Sinatra," CBS, 10-11 EST - documentary on the personal life and career of the singer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Washington, D. C.

Dear JC:

This is in reply to your most recent letter of the 7th inst. I am glad to hear from you again, and to know that you are out there in Arizona. I know you must be in a fine climate, for your condition. Back in 1916, when I was with the 11th U. S. Infantry, on the Border, at Douglas, Arizona, during Poncho Villa trouble, across the border there, in the State of Sonora, a town named Auqua Preieta, just across the border from Douglas. I remember when during the year or so that I was there, I used to do sentry duty, as a recruit, there at the international gate. It was always hot as heck during the day, and cold at nite; but I loved every bit of it, and felt better then, than I ever have since. I remember, before WW 1, when me and another fellow I soldiered with, used to go AWOL, catch a freight train, over the El Paso, & SouthWestern, and ride over to Hatchita, and Columbus, N. Mex; the place Villa raided and burned, killing many soldiers of the 13th U.S. Cav.; plus a lot of civilians. Incidently, I have a RR Spike, that was the last of its kind, a spike, taken from an almost empty barrel, it being the last one in it, taken from the back porch of the RR Depot there, while the raid was going on, by Albert Richardson, and George Lyon, both of Oran and Morley. Just before the raid by Villa, and his 500 or more bandits, Albert and George were put off the blinds, of the Golden State Limited there. Albert told me, that he grabbed the last spike in the barrel, just as Poncho Villa, was going across the tracks, at a crossing just about 50 yards west of the station. The time was sometime after midnight, March 9th, 1916. They ran and jumped off the platform and hid under some box cars parked on the house track behind the depot, and stayed there until all the yelling and shooting was over, and then they came out from their place of hiding and ran east of the tracks down in the yards where they stayed under another car, for about an hour, till, a freight train came along, in which they boarded; and then were back on their way to California. They had been washing dishes in a restaurant in El Paso, when they decided to go to Imperial Valley, to work in the early crop harvesting there, wherever it was. I had talked to Albert in Oran, sometime in the late spring of 1916, and we were talking about the Columbus Raid, and he showed me the spike, and told me of the Raid. He had it painted with immitation gold paint, and being a young guy at the time, I like the looks of it and admired it, and wanted to buy it off him; but he refused to sell it to me. It was not long after that, that I was washing dishes, myself, in a restaurant, in Chicago, in day time, and sleeping in Grant park, near the I. C. depot, on Lake Michigan front; when I decided on joining the Army. I was shipped as a recruit, from JB., and routed out of El Paso, to Douglas, Ariz., thru Columbus, and we all had the privilege of getting off the train, and viewing the destroyed business section of the town; before moving on to Douglas, and to the 11th U. S. Infantry, our permanently assigned organization; I landing in "K" Company of the 11th.

After World War 1, I wrote to Albert Richardson, who was 1st. Sergeant, of Co. K, 140th Infantry, 35th Division, and at the time was encamped at Fort Sill, Okla. And I continued to write to him, even after he and I were in France, although separated, and in different divisions. In our correspondence I asked him about the spike. And just before he was killed at Vouquois Hill, in the Argone, Spet. or October 1918, I received a letter from him telling me that he had written his mother about the Spike, and asked her to give it to me in case of his failure to return from France. And during the night that his body lay in the old Armory, at Morley, prior to his burial the next day, his sister, I don't remember her name, stepped up to me and handed me the spike, telling me that her Mother had asked her to deliver it to me. Thus, a wonderful jesture from an old friend, whom I'd took many drinks with, whose body then lay on French soil. He had paid the supreme sacrifice; in someways reminding us all of a much greater sacrifice paid by one, almost two thousand years ago; not only for freedom, but for life thruout eternity, for all mankind. I still feel today that Albert Richardson's body was not sacrificed in vain. He, like you, I listed as one of my best friends, and it was a great and treasured experience in having known him, and you too, until the day that we shall all meet in the Happy Hunting Grounds and can have the, possible, pleasure of downing a charge or two, and maybe another rusty bucket of beer from Metz saloon, with old Doc. Bassel, Press Rosenberry, and others who have gone before us, including Duce Smith, and some more people who like to partake of the great conversation watter.

I was very glad to get the clipping from your column, especially the one in which you eulogized me so highly, in which I wish to thank you very much. And when you get your book published, I should be very glad to receive a copy of. I am feeling very well; have my own private room here, and an Orderly assigned me to look after my room, and other personal matters that I request of him. And while hoping this letter will find you, still able to sit up and take nourishment, as usual. I beg to remain,

Your sincere friend,
Albert L. Brady,
P. O. Box 250,
USSH. Sta. 58.
Washington, D. C. 20315

P. S. Write when you feel the urge and I shall do the same.

The above letter was received by our good friend, J. C. May. Upon reading same, we thought it was a sufficient interest in our area that we asked him to allow us to reproduce it in our "Letters to the Editor" column. He has graciously given us his consent. We believe our readers will enjoy it.

Cape Hires City Manager

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The city manager of Minot, N. D., Paul F. Frederick, will become Cape Girardeau's first city manager Jan. 1, the City Council announced Monday.

Frederick, 42, a civil engineer, has been in his present job for 7 1/2 years and has been in the municipal field since 1946.

The council disclosed that Mr. Frederick's salary will be $15,000 per year.

State Action Asked to Solve Urban Problems

ST. LOUIS AP -- Three speakers warned the 71st conference of the National Municipal League that state governments must take the initiative and solve their own metropolitan problems unless they want increased federal intervention in state affairs.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri said the war on urban problems can be solved only if there is "the reform of state government and wide-spread acceptance of professionalism with government."

League President Alfred E. Driscoll, former governor of New Jersey, said local and state governments should be made more effective, efficient and responsible.

Former Kansas governor John Anderson said state governments must be revitalized to do their share in meeting the problems of the times.

"What are the implications for the future of democratic government if we cannot make democracy work at the state level?" he asked.

Reapportionment has put state government in a questionable position in the public eye, Anderson said. Most state legislatures, he said, were not apportioned according to their own constitutions.

Because of this and the greater ability and willingness of the federal government to attempt a solution of modern problems has put the future of state government in jeopardy, Anderson said.

State legislatures must be upgraded, he said, in order to increase the understanding between social groups of different economic and ethnic makeup. He specifically mentioned urban and rural populations.

Gov. Hearnes also called for a major reallocation of tax revenues, rather than more federal grant-in-aid programs. A vital need for a solution of urban problems, he said, is "a direct return of federal surpluses produced by the (federal) income tax to state and local governments."

Picasso, usually reluctant to finish a painting, once asked a museum exhibiting one of his works to put a sign next to it reading::"Don't touch. Painting still alive."

W. J. Jacob

Jacob Sales Manager

W. J. Jacob has been appointed an area sales manager for Gulf Oil Corporation's agricultural chemicals division, Byron M. Kern, manager of the division, announced in Kansas City.

He will be responsible for all sales of agricultural chemicals division products sold in Southeast Missouri, southern Illinois and western Kentucky. He will be located in the area sales office here.

"This new assignment is the result of consolidating all marketing personnel into one organization responsible for selling the complete line of fertilizers and agricultural chemicals," said Kern. "Extensive changes have been made in our sales force in order for us to efficiently meet the challenges of the rapid and dynamic growth of the fertilizer and pesticide industries.

"Previously, separate sales groups handled special products and the streamlining of marketing will enable each agricultural sales representative to provide more comprehensive and direct service to the customer."

A native of Wittenberg, Jacob is a graduate of the University of Missouri, Columbia, where he received a bachelor of science degree in agriculture. He has been associated with the fertilizer industry more than 15 years. He joined the agricultural chemicals division in 1962.

Jacob lives at 572 Park Ave.,

Armed Forces

Charles R. Long

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. - Airman Charles R. Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Long of R.R. 1, Bloomfield, Mo., has been selected for training at Lowry AFB, Colo. as an Air Force munitions specialist.

The airman, a 1963 graduate of Bell City High School, recently completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, Ark. -- According to Mr. Bertrand E. Shields, base civilian personnel officer, as many as 10 to 12 civilian employees may be hired for duty at Blytheville starting in January 1966.

The Air Force wide program will commence Jan. 1, and will be the first step toward the eventual replacement of 20,000 military personnel in the support areas.

Military personnel replaced will be shifted to support other requirements based on a study begun almost two years ago under Project Prime BEEF (Base Engineering Emergency Forces).

Prime BEEF is a long-range program which will identify the minimum number of military personnel required in civil engineering to provide the necessary mobility for Air Force deployment, a balanced state-side-overseas ratio, a greater degree of training and career progression and the military element required in the day-to-day work force.

Mr. Shields stated that the exact number of civilians to be hired at Blytheville has not been determined, but as many as 12 might be hired in January. He added that the hiring will be spread out between January and June.

Rebuilding of East Berlin

BERLIN (AP)—"The damned Russians," the old man said, leaning heavily on his cane. "They robbed us blind. And now our own Genossen (German Communist comrades) say they will rebuild all this in five years. I don't believe it."

The old man looked around the square in East Berlin between the bombed-out twin German and French cathedrals, where so far the Communists have rebuilt one pillar to keep the French cathedral's main entrance from falling down.

Elsewhere a wiry Communist party official outlined the regime's plan for a new Berlin. A glistening white plastic model of a new city center was at his elbow.

"It is important, that you see the naked truth," he told an American reporter. "That is all we ask."

The "naked truth" of East Berlin is hard to come by. The Communists speak solely in enthusiastic terms while people say very little of what they think.

The truth apparently lies somewhere between the pessimism of the old man and the optimism of the party functionary.

For the Communists, East Berlin has apparently become top priority, the place to put East Germany's best foot forward.

The year 1970 is their target date for completion of a facelifting. For years after World War II East Berlin has been a drab, sad city still largely in ruins in comparison with West Berlin.

A U.S. economic expert says: "The Communists have a real chance to accomplish what they have set out to do. They have taken a major decision to make East Berlin a showplace.

"Their economy is moving forward and for years now the Russians have quit taking everything the East Germans produced. The question remains, however, how good a job they can do, how long what they build will last, how good the workmanship will be. They still lack materials, as well as workers, and the workers still lack initiative.

"You might say there is much building in East Berlin but it is not what we in America would call a boom."

Nor are the lack of workers, materials and initiative the only problem the Communists face in trying to match what has been accomplished in West Berlin.

There is resistance among young people, even after constant indoctrination.

When three East Berlin policemen formed a circle around the writer, giving him a traffic ticket, a blond of about 20 walked by. He looked at the green - clad, booted cops, sneered and said, "Ihr Schweine you pigs."

The police did nothing.

For the casual visitor to East Berlin, the downtown area has changed considerably in recent years.

The area along the Berlin Wall near the Brandenburg Gate, has been spruced up although guards with submachine guns remain there.

A thick carpet of grass stretches down the street behind a neat wire fence, curving over a mound that denotes the bunker where Adolf Hitler died.

Unter Den Linden, leading into East Berlin from the Brandenburg Gate and once the most famous of German boulevards, again is graced by trees. New glass and steel buildings are interspersed with the restored opera house and Humboldt University and the mammoth Soviet Embassy. An automobile salesroom shows brightly hued Soviet-bloc cars.

There is speculation that when all is ready, the Communists will reopen the Brandenburg Gate as a crossing point for foreigners, thereby making it possible to usher them directly into the heart of what they want to see.

The Berlin cathedral is a massive, if cleaned up, ruin. Unlike the German and French cathedrals which the Communists say they will restore, the Berlin cathedral will not be rebuilt—"it is not a work of art and therefore not worth the millions of marks rebuilding would cost."

The cathedral dominates Marx-Engels Square. If it were rebuilt it would also dominate the heart of the new city center the Communists are planning.

In both halves of Berlin busy city planners are mapping out new streets, highways, bridges and rail lines that project into the other half of the city.

The hub of the projected Communist city center is to be old Alexander Square around which are grouped department stores now run by Ho, a giant, all-purpose, state-run store.

Ho's ads amuse the English-speaking observer because "Ho-Ho-Ho-Ho" posters appear beneath Communist flags.

Off Alexander Square the Communists have built brightly painted apartment houses and cultural buildings that represent a first step toward the all-German Socialist look that the Walter Ulbricht regime is trying to create.

Rents in the new East Berlin apartments average 130 marks monthly—about $32 at the East German rate of exchange.

East Berliners are better dressed, have more to eat and buy, than was the case a few years ago. But East Berlin as a capital leaves the impression of a police state, regulated by countless people in uniform.

Few Russians are seen in the streets, but thousands of Russian troops are just outside the city.

Leader of Grange Is Re-elected

TOPEKA, Kan. AP — At the National Grange meeting in Topeka last week, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman described Herschel D. Newsom, the Grange's national master, as "a tower of strength."

The description is fitting.

Newsom, 60, has been the 98-year - old farm organization's principal spokesman and authority for 15 years, and was re-elected Monday to another two-year term as its chief executive.

Freeman also paid tribute to Newsom's help in formulating government farm programs, one of Washington's most thankless taks, simply because of the impossibility to please all farmers, let alone all farm organizations.

It's understandable that the administration would turn to a moderate farm leader such as Newsom for advice.

The Grange, like himself, is "largely middle-of-the-road," as he puts it, standing between the conservative farmers who want no government regulation whatever and the liberals who want more.

Newsom said Monday he was hopeful for an eventual return of agriculture to free market practes and prices.

"But first," he added, "we have got to have sufficient checks to stabilize prices as the changes are made."

The 1965 Farm Act, he said, is a step in that direction. It breaks away from the traditional one-price structure for U.S. farm products that has discouraged sales abroad.

And its long-range effect, Newsome explained, would be to get the government out of the storage business which, in turn, would reduce production, restrictions, in operations since the 1920s.

"I'm not saying it can be done in a certain number of years," he said. "That depends on the rest of the world."

Newsom has been a farmer all his life, and held his first grange office when he was 6, as a junior grange gatekeeper.

He and Mrs. Newsom still call their farm near Columbus, Ind. home, but maintain residence in Washington, grange headquarters. The farm is operated on a crop-sharing basis with a long-time family employe.

Newsom learned the Grange under tutelage of his father, who also was an officer, and served his apprenticeship through the ranks. He was state master in Indiana 13 years before becoming national master.

He has a B.A. from the University of Indiana, where he graduated in 1926, and in 1960 was named a distinguished alumni.

One of Newsom's announced goals is a strengthened Grange membership. And the place to start, he said, is development of the junior grange. Newsom should know.

That was his own Grange starting point 54 years ago.

"California is a fine place to live in -- if you happen to be an orange."

Retarded Children Week Set

JEFFERSON CITY -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has issued a proclamation setting out Sunday through Nov. 25 1965 as retarded children's week in Missouri. The time coincides with national retarded children's week, according to announcement by the Missouri Association for Retarded Children.

The Governor's proclamation calls attention to the 5.6 million mentally retarded in the United States, and an estimated 134,000 or more in Missouri alone, who "can be educated and trained in special facilities geared to their needs and given an opportunity to lead happy, useful lives."

"A vital need exists for intensive research to uncover the causes and preventative measures in mental retardation," the proclamation continues, calling for all citizens to "give full support to this effort in behalf of the mentally retarded and their families."

Acknowledging Governor Hearnes' proclamation, MARC President Ramon V. Conklin of Kansas City, stated that "an alert public has become concerned with Missouri's retarded children. The retarded are receiving the special services which will enable them to be tax-producing earners, instead of tax-consumers." Conklin called for a continued public concern to make such services available to every retarded child in Missouri.

The Missouri Association for Retarded Children, with 30 local Associations, is the sole voluntary agency working entirely in the interest of the retarded. The Association provides consultation in program development, public information aids, and materials on help for retarded children. The Association, with offices at 100 West Dunklin, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101, offers speakers, films and literature on request.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: We have not seen my husband's family for years. His mother is domineering and tyrannical. Her children have ulcers and they're nervous or divorced.

My husband was lucky. He broke away at 18 and has not considered himself part of the family since. We have made attempts at limited contact but it has always ended in a fight, so we gave up.

Now his parents are old and crying around Florida because nobody visits them. My husband has begun to talk about the early memories, which were good. He says he wishes things could have been different.

A question has been raised about whether we should attend the funeral when the time comes. I say "No!" He feels he should go. Isn't this the height of hypocrisy? Your opinion is wanted.--COLUMBUS COUPLE

Dear Couple: When you die, Madame, I suggest that you leave your remains to a medical school. It would be interesting to find out what you've been using for a heart.

If you don't feel like going to the funeral when your in-laws pass on, stay home but please don't add to your husband's guilt by talking him out of going. I very much hope he goes to visit his parents while he can still see them alive. Without you they'll probably get along just dandy.

Dear Ann Landers: I call a spade a spade, so please clean up the language and print this letter.

I divorced my husband six years ago because he had the morals of an alley cat. Our daughter was eight years old. Last year he married a society dame who is filthy rich. She too was divorced and had two children by her former marriage.

Our daughter spends every Friday and Saturday with her father and his family. They live in a beautiful home, the kids have maid service and they eat on a mahogany table with organdy place mats.

Lately my daughter has found a lot wrong with me and our apartment. She says dad's place is more her style. Also the food over there is better. She told me yesterday that her dad is a wonderful man and I made a mistake when I divorced him.

I don't like the way things are heading. How does a mother tell a 14-year-old daughter that her dad was a rat?--EIGHT BALL

Dear Eight: You don't tell her any such thing. You try to give her a decent set of values so she will not be folled into thinking that organdy place mats and maid service insures a happy home.

If you give your daughter love and a feeling of personal worth you need not worry about losing out.

Dear Ann Landers: Four years ago I became friendly with the real estate man (married) who sold us our home. He kept coming by the house several times a week to make sure the roof was in good shape, the furnace was O.K. and like that. Well, Ann, the inevitable happened. We fell for each other.

Five months ago my husband died. I know I should stop seeing this married man but I'm so depressed I can't make the break.

Last night I looked at his billfold which was on the dresser. When I saw the picture of his wife and four children I felt like a worm. But what is a lonely widow to do? Please. Tell me.--VALENTINE

Dear Val: Put that show on the road.

So you are lonesome? What was your excuse for the four years that your husband was alive? The short answer to your question, "What is a lonely widow to do?" goes like this: Straighten up and fly right.

Do you feel ill at ease. . .out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Liquid Assets in Bank Building

SAN FRANCISCO AP -- Belly right up to the teller's window, folks, and put down your money. What you'll get back will be a drink, not a receipt.

Kelly Buchanan, a real estate man, opened a new bar Monday in the branch office of the now defunct San Francisco National Bank.

He didn't make many changes. Remaining from the bank are a $7,000 chandelier and a $14,000 panel. Also around are red velvet sofas and leather ash trays from another branch of the doomed bank. Drinks are served through the teller's windows.

The U.S. controller of currency closed the bank.

Don C. Silverthorne, who founded the bank in 1962, has been charged with misapplying its funds and accepting fees illegally for arranging loans.

Arabic Zero

The ancient system of numerals used by the Arabs and Hindus had only nine elements, the figures 1 to 9. It was not until the 800s that the Arabs came to use 0 (or zero) as a symbol for no thing or no number.

Pemiscot County Votes In Favor Of Hospital Addition

Agree On Surplus Disposal

NEW YORK (AP) — The controversy between the government and the aluminum industry appeared ended today with agreement on disposal of 1.4 million tons of surplus aluminum.

The industry seemed pleased with the agreement.

The producers and the government came to terms late Tuesday after two weeks of dispute in which President Johnson's administration forced the industry to roll back a price increase.

The controversy began when Olin Mathieson Co. raised prices of ingot half a cent a pound and of fabricated metal one cent a pound.

The government called the boost inflationary and unjustified.

When other producers, including Aluminum Co. of America, the No. 1 producer, joined in the price increase, the General Services Administration threatened to throw 300,000 tons of its surplus metal on the market immediately.

In the face of this, the aluminum companies rescinded the increase and arrangements were made for discussions on orderly disposal of the stockpiled metal.

"This was basically what was being discussed before the controversy," an industry spokesman said. "This is what the industry people were feeling would be the best way of handling the stockpile.

"The advantage now is that we have a planned disposal which, of course, is the way the industry would want it. This is the obvious advantage."

The Pentagon announced that industry and government representatives agreed in principle that the industry will purchase the surplus aluminum at an average rate of not less than 100,000 tons a year or the defense requirement, whichever is greater, but not to exceed 200,000 tons a year.

The Pentagon said the defense requirement for 1966 is estimated to range between 300,000 and 400,000 tons.

The industry representatives who participated in the discussions were from Alcoa, Olin Mathieson, Reynolds Metals Co. and Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co.

Rude Receptions For Kennedy

CONCEPCION, Chile (AP) — Spitting South Americans gave a rude reception Tuesday night to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in Chile and to Secretary of State Dean Rusk in Uruguay.

About 100 pro-Communist students spat on Kennedy at the University of Concepcion, threw eggs, rocks and money at him and drowned him out when he tried to speak to a student crowd of several thousand. It was the only unpleasant note to an otherwise enthusiastic reception in an area where Chilean Communists and Marxist Socialists have their greatest strength.

The eggs and stones missed the New York senator, but spittle fell on his forehead and clothes.

Rusk was the target of a 25-year-old man who slipped up and spat at him in Montevideo just after the secretary had placed a wreath at the monument to Gen. Jose Artigas, Uruguay's national hero. State Department press officer Richard I. Phillips, accompanying Rusk, said the secretary was not hit.

The man shouted "This in the name of my people" as he spat. Police seized him and took him away. In his pockets were leaflets with the words "Fuera Rusk (Rusk get out)."

Kennedy, who is on a South American tour, insisted on going to the university despite warnings of a hostile reception. He waited calmly on the stage of the gymnasium for 20 minutes while the small group of leftists sang the national anthems of Cuba and Chile and screamed "Assassin" and "Yankee go home" at him.

When the senator finally started to speak, the jeerers drowned him out. He asked if they would come forward to discuss matters with him, and the leftists shouted back that he should come to them.

Kennedy started toward them. As he approached, some tried to kick him, others spat at him and others burned a U.S. flag in a corner of the gymnasium.

Other students tried to quiet the leftists. Some challenged them to fight. Aides and newsmen surrounded the senator and he left the building.

Outside some anti-Communist students approached Kennedy's wife, Ethel, and said to her, "Senora, please, forgive us for this shameful situation." This group waited in front of the gym and when the leftists came out set on them with clubs and stones.

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Freezing temperatures were recorded in nearly all parts of Missouri this morning, but the weatherman says warmer weather is on the way.

Lows ranged from 24 at Kirksville to 32 at Cape Girardeau, which had the state's high of 77 Tuesday.

Lows tonight will be 22-28 in the east and south and in the 30s in the northwest. Highs Thursday will be in the 50s with some in the 60s in the southwest.

Through next Monday temperatures are expected to average 3 to 10 degrees above normal in the east and south and 3 to 6 degrees above in the northwest.

Head Injury Result Of Crash

A two-car collision at 7:30 a.m., three miles north of New Madrid on highway 61, resulted in a head injury to LeRoy Nunn, 33, Lilbourn, the state patrol reports.

Nunn was driving a 1965 Ford, when a 1963 Chevrolet, driven by Eddie Schuerenberg, 52, Kewanee, pulled out on the highway in front of him.

Nunn was taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital, where he was treated for a scalp wound.

Four persons were hurt at 6:05 p.m. Monday when a pick-up truck struck the rear of another pickup on Highway 84 at the east city limits of Kennett.

The driver of the front truck, Roscoe Right, 44, of Bragg City, suffered a sprained back. His two sons, Freddie 9, and Roger, 5, incurred minor injuries.

Oscar Leathers, 36, Rives, the driver of the second truck, received a fractured left arm.

Assault Charge Against Risco Teacher Dropped

NEW MADRID - A felonious assault charge against a Risco high school teacher, Ralph Blough, was dismissed Tuesday in magistrate court, when three youths failed to prosecute.

The charge was the outgrowth of a Halloween prank staged by the three youths as they approached his home. They were struck by several pellets fired from a shotgun.

None of the youths were injured seriously. A few shots struck the leg of one of them.

Kansas City Mayor Wins

ST. LOUIS AP -- Kansas City Mayor Ilus Davis won a bet with St. Louis Mayor A. J. Cervantes on Tuesday's bond elections for junior colleges in their two cities.

Each mayor bet that his city would produce a higher percentage of favorable votes. Kansas City voters approved a $25 million bond issue by a four-to-one margin and St. Louis and St. Louis County voters approved a $47,200,000 bond issue by a three-to-one margin.

At stake in the bet was $50 worth of steaks.

Custom Made Purse Stolen From Woman

Mrs. Steve Bell, 822 North Ranney, reported to police that two Negro girls opened her car door as it was parked in front of the C and M Wholesale Company at 6 p.m. yesterday and took her purse.

The purse is custom made and has black with brown stripes. No money was in the purse, but it did contain car keys, note pads and a makeup kit.

$400,000 In Bonds Approved

CARUTHERSVILLE - Pemiscot county voters turned out in good numbers when 28 of the 30 voting precincts favored a $400,000 construction program at the Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti. The vote was 2,195 to 383.

The bond issue total, to be matched by a $400,000 federal grant, will provide a 44-bed addition to the 86-bed hospital. It will be built across the west wing of the three-story hospital.

According to County Clerk Harold Jones, the bond issue would add between an eight and 10 cent levy per $100 assessed valuation of property. Hospital needs have expanded greatly. With the new medicare program beginning next summer present facilites would have been taxed to beyond capacity.

The hospital was built in 1950 and dedicated in 1951, with a 50-bed capacity. The second addition was built in 1961. It then was increased to 86 beds.

The sale of the bonds, according to the presiding judge of the county court, will be in a few months.

Construction of the addition is expected to begin early next spring.

Gun Victim Deserter

AURORA, Ohio AP -- Authorities have identified the body of a man found shot to death as an Army deserter who had posed nearly four months as a secret government agent.

Pvt. Charles E. Lucas, 23, of Gore, Va., apparently took his own life, police said. His body was found near a pond on Cochran Road Tuesday night.

Earl E. Brown, special agent in charge of the FBI's Cleveland office, said Lucas had been declared a deserter from Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., July 22. He had identified himself to an Aurora couple as a government agent when he rented a room, Brown said.

Cervante Thanks General Franco

MADRID, Spain AP -- Mayor A. J. Cervantes of St. Louis, Mo., called on Gen. Francisco Franco today to thank him for the donation to St. Louis of the Spanish pavilion at the New York World Fair.

"It was a nice meeting with a nice man," Cervantes commented.

Justice Awaited Him With Open Arms

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. AP -- Steven Schriver, 18, Indianapolis, state reformatory inmate brought here Tuesday to testify in a robbery trial, bolted from deputy sheriffs and fled up a ramp of the new county jail into Maryland Street.

He ran headlong into 60 deputies standing at attention for the funeral of another deputy.

Valley Attacks Continue

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP --North Vietnamese regulars pressed attacks on regrouped U. S. cavalrymen in the Ia Drang River Valley today while B52 jet bombers ripped at Communist entrenchments in nearby hills.

Near the coast, a Viet Cong battalion overran a government district headquarters and its 150-man garrison at Hiep Duc, 28 miles south of Da Nang. U. S. military sources said every building there was reported destroyed. An aerial survey showed no signs of life. The Viet Cong were reported to have left several of their victims impaled on stakes.

Four U. S. planes - three Marine and one Navy -- were lost on a bombing strike against a bridge on the railway line linking Hanoi, North Viet Nam's capital, with its port of Haiphong.

Of the four pilots, a spokesman said two were rescued, one was killed and another is missing.

The battle of the Ia Drang Valley, which newsmen were told already had cost the Communist 890 dead and the greatest American losses in any single engagement of the war, shifted to a new field north of the river.

It was three miles from the helicopter landings site in a jungle clearing 220 miles northeast of Saigon that two battalions of the U. S. 1st Cavalry, Airmobile, Division had defended for three days against repeated North Vietnamese attacks.

The Americans pulled out early today. One battalion shifted back by helicopter to the encampment of supporting artillery, about three miles southeast of the helicopter site. The other hiked out, heading north across the river.

U.S. Inspects Power Systems

WASHINGTON AP -- Federal power commission officials and power industry experts began on-the-spot inspections today of the 23 power systems in and near last week's blackout area.

Among their assignments will be interviews with persons who were in charge of substations and other major operational points when the power failure took place. New York City and much of the Northeast and parts of Canada were without power for as long as 10 hours.

The commission and industry experts also began a study today of reports requested from the 23 power systems detailing what steps the firms had taken, planned or recommended to avert another blackout.

One By One Party Secrets Are Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine having Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon turn up in your neighborhood for a party and you'll get the idea of how it was on Highland Place.

Especially, if the host and hostess — the nation's attorney general and his wife — are trying to keep everything a secret.

It was like a block party with kids and dogs and grownups watching the show. Four boys climbed on a roof to get a better view. Older folks brought their drinks along and launched party-watcher parties.

Suddenly, that sleek, black Rolls-Royce rolled up. The princess, in a white satin gown and white mink wrap, stopped briefly outside the house. Flashbulbs flared.

A crowd pressed tightly against the white fence to watch the excitement at the home of Atty. Gen. and Mrs. Nicholas Katzenbach, the social lions of Washington Tuesday night.

Applause and a loud, appreciative wolf whistle greeted the princess. She waved and smiled.

It was 11 p.m. and the candlelight party with five-man combo was on — an affair for young, gay, talented types, hostess Lydia Katzenbach said the royal couple might not otherwise have met.

As they checked in, past a cordon of reporters and photographers, the secret guests — about 60 — turned out to include the wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara; presidential assistants McGeorge Bundy and Jack Valenti; newspaper columnists Art Buchwald and Russell Baker and television newscaster David Brinkley.

Some screeches of laughter were heard outside when Lord Snowdon donned an ungainly sweater adorned with black ties. Mrs. Katzenbach made it after hearing he once complained he never knew when he went home whether he'd be required to wear blue jeans or black tie.

It looked like a long, gay night.

Missouri Power Parley Tuesday

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Utility officials and Missouri Public Service commissioners will confer in Jefferson City Tuesday on whether a massive power failure could be averted in Missouri.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes suggested the meeting after last week's power disaster in the Northeastern United States.

China's U.N. Bid Fails

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States appeared today to have killed Red China's chances for a U.N. seat this year with a maneuver that set off angry protests from Peking's supporters.

To make sure the door remained closed to Communist China, the United States and 10 other nations called on the General Assembly to stand by its 1961 decision that the seating question required a two-thirds majority.

U.S. representatives have insisted that Peking won't get even a simple majority. They said they called for reaffirmation of the two-thirds rule only to speed up a decision.

Informal polls have indicated, however, that Peking might have enough votes to get in if only a simple majority was required.

The United States has asked to speak just before the vote, apparently in a last effort to bolster its case. U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, who has been ill with a virus, planned to make the final argument.

U.S. delegate Charles W. Yost went before the assembly Tuesday night with the plea that the China representation issue is a vital one which should not be decided by a simple majority. He declared that peace in Asia is involved in the decision and the two-thirds rule is therefore mandatory.

Yost rejected claims by Peking's supporters that Red China might be more receptive to unconditional negotiations to end the Viet Nam war if it belonged to the world forum.

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand AP -- The first round-the-world flight over both poles arrived in Christchurch today six hours behind schedule. The leaders of the flight confidently predicted that they would complete their trip to Honolulu within their target flying time.

The specially equipped Boeing 707 jet landed at Christchurch after a flight over the South Pole from Buenos Aires, Argentina. The total flying time since it left Honolulu Sunday was 42 hours, 26 minutes and 26 seconds.

The expedition's target for the flight of more than 26,000 miles is 56 hours and 48 minutes.

Vatican Council Approves Birth Control Statement

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican Ecumenical Council today approved an interim statement on birth control that some experts say eventually could provide the basis for a moral acceptance of contraceptives.

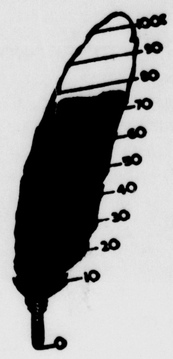

The council also took a showdown vote on its controversial declaration deploring all nuclear stockpiling as a threat to mankind. Results will not be announced until Friday at the council's next working session.

Winding up three days of voting on the council's schema on modern world problems, the bishops took a ballot on the document's entire chapter on the family and marriage.

The key paragraphs of this section stress conjugal love in marriage as an element important not only for bringing children into the world but as a physical expression of mutual love between husband and wife. The document affirms that a couple must follow church teaching on birth control but leaves the way open for changes in that teaching.

The chapter was approved by a vote of 1,596-72, with another 484 bishops approving "with reservations."

The nature of these reservations was not known. They could apply to the birth control paragraphs or to other parts of the chapter.

United Fund Pledges Rise To $30,211

The United Fund drive stands at the 78 per cent level - a rise of three per cent in a week.

This was announced by Bill Scarbrough, drive chairman, at a meeting in the cafeteria at the junior high school.

Pledges total $30,211.39. The goal is $38,900 and the fund raising drive deadline has been moved from last Monday to Dec. 1.

Scarbrough urges all people, who supported the fund in previous years to help again. He asked that they not wait to be contacted but to get in touch with him, Mrs. Jewell Allen, executive secretary, a United director, or mail a check or pledge to Mrs. Allen.

Mrs. Allen announced these businesses have contributed 100 per cent.

HAYWARD, Calif. AP -- Tom Hambaugh and Rosa McDonald found a common interest. Both liked to hear radio broadcasts of the San Francisco Giants baseball games.

"Oh, dear, what will we talk about now?" Rosa asked after the season ended.

"Let's talk about getting married," suggested Tom.

The Rev. Joseph Fouquette married them at a rest home Tuesday.

Tom, who is blind, is 92. Rosa, nearly blind, is 91.

Suggests Nuclear Weapons In Germany

NEW YORK AP -- An American official has suggested equipping West Germany with nuclear weapons capable of reaching Soviet nuclear sites in western Russia, the New York Times reported today.

In a dispatch from Washington, the Times said the suggestion was offered by John G. Palfrey of the Atomic Energy Commission as a personal view, intended as a possible reconciliation of two problems:

-- The stalemate with Russia over negotiation of a treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

--The desires of West Germany for greater participation in its nuclear defense.

Manager Plan Loses In Carthage

CARTHAGE, Mo. AP -- A proposal to replace the mayor-council form of government with a council-city manager plan was rejected 1,983 to 715 Tuesday in a special election.

Try To Break Deadlock

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — House and Senate conferees resumed efforts today to compromise their deadlock over House redistricting.

When the legislature adjourned last week, there was no sign of any yielding on either side.

The Senate has been insistent that if a redistricting commission failed to act, House members would have to run at large. The theory is this would apply sufficient pressure to force an agreement by the commission.

The House is opposed to that system. Instead it passed a bill carrying a provision that would let the House redistrict itself if the commission broke down.

Some legislators have expressed the fear the impasse is so serious the special session might wind up doing nothing. This is the fifth week and the session limit is 60 days.

Also nanging fire is a bill to increase major welfare payments, including old age assistance and aid to the disabled, from $70 a month to $75.

As passed by the House, the bill provided an old person could live with relatives, no matter what the income in the home, and still be eligible for his pension.

It also authorized the old folks to have up to $1,000 in burial or life insurance without affecting their eligibility.

The Senate Welfare Committee struck out both provisions and the amended bill is pending in the Senate.

Club Told Of Bank Services

Pat Lea, vice president of the Bank of Sikeston spoke to the Kiwanis club Tuesday night on "Banking -- Old and New".

He touched on the two different types of banks -- state and national, the distinctive powers of each and discussed services of banks.

He stressed the importance of building up the economy of the area by attracting new industries and by developing industries, which would use local products. He said that he was sure banks would take more interest in such developments.

Next week the club will entertain 110 farmers of the area.

Poor Countries In State Not Lowest In U.S.

WASHINGTON, D. C. --People who live in the poorest counties in Missouri live rather high on the hog as compared with those other counties in the country, according to facts and figures dug up by the bureau of the census.

This is proved by information as to income for people in 10 of the so-called poorest counties in Missouri. It appears that Washington poverty officials who claim they worry about poverty do not know all the facts.

New Madrid county is ranked as the county in the state with the lowest per capita income.

New Madrid county has a higher per capita income than the people of 301 other counties in the nation.

Pemiscot may have higher income than 518 counties in the nation, but it is rated as being ninth in low income in the state. It is a county that poverty officials are worrying about, or at least they claim they are.

It's possible these counties want projects, which will improve their economy, but the point is that many of the so-called poor counties are not poor in comparison with other counties of the nation.

Review Problems Of Hemisphere

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Nineteen foreign ministers of American republics assembled today for a basic, wide-ranging review aimed at updating the inter-American system to cope better with the hemisphere's changing political and economic problems.

The first day's program of the special inter-American conference of foreign ministers included a welcome by President Humberto Castello Branco of Brazil, get-acquainted meetings and the formal opening session tonight with Castello Branco giving the keynote speech.

Thursday the conference — the first such in 11 years — begins to get on with its business. The parley, expected to run into early December, will consider proposals for revamping the charter of the Organization of American States. These could be taken up at a charter revision conference next spring.

Cuba and Venezuela were absent. Cuba is barred from the OAS because of its Communist government, and Venezuela does not recognize the military government of Brazil, the host country.

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, arriving Tuesday night from a brief side trip to Argentina and Uruguay, predicted that "a broad consensus will develop" from the conference.

Hockaday On Job As Patrol Leader

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Edmund I. (Mike) Hockaday, 54, took over today as the new superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

Hockaday, who has been second in command, was appointed Tuesday by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes to succeed Col, Hugh H. Waggoner, who died unexpectedly at Poplar Bluff last Wednesday.

Hockaday and Waggoner joined the patrol in the same class of 35 on July 1, 1937, and have worked closely together for years.

He told newsmen "I'm sure we'll carry on in the pattern established by Waggoner and the governors he served under."

Hockaday did not announce immediately who would succeed him in the No. 2 job.

The new superintendent has served in every rank, much of the time at general headquarters in Jefferson City where he worked in the finger-print and record section, was in charge of the crime laboratory and was commanding officer of headquarters.

In 1961 he was assigned by the governor to be acting chief of police in Kansas City for five months.

He is a graduate of Westminster College at Fulton and of the FBI's National Police Academy. He took special training in homicide investigation at Harvard and attended the supervisory officers' training school at Northwestern.

He studied use of the lie detector under its inventor, Leonard Keeler.

Hockaday and his wife have two daughters, Mrs. Charles Czarlinsky of Jefferson City and Mrs. William E. Dawdy of Springfield.

Search For Girl's Body In Desert Near Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — In a stretch of desert just outside southern Arizona's biggest city, a search goes on for the body of pretty Alleen Rowe.

The 15-year-old girl's mother, Mrs. Norma Rowe, identified two metal hair curlers uncovered at the spot Tuesday as those of her daughter's. Alleen was wearing the curlers when she disappeared May 31, 1964.

Two young people charged with murdering Alleen helped officers in the search, but their attorneys said they would not allow John Saunders, 19, and Mary Rae French, 18, to go back today.

Alleen reportedly was wearing two rings, and Sheriff Waldon Burr said he would use a metal detector today to hunt for her shallow grave.

Officers said the grave may be deeper now because of an unusual amount of rain that fell in Tucson last year. Rains could have moved a large amount of sand from higher areas to where the grave was dug.

The possibility that the girl's body could have been moved by one of her attackers also was being considered, officers said.

Although the girl's mother said her daughter had told her of a teen-aged sex club which she refused to join, police discounted this.

"There is nothing to substantiate her belief at this time," Police Chief Bernard Garmire said.

An informer told police that Alleen was killed by Saunders, Miss French and Charles Schmid, 23, Garmire said. All three were charged with murdering her and were jailed without bond.

Schmid, a former gymnastics champion, also has been charged with murdering two other girls. The bodies of Gretchen Fritz, 17, and Wendy Fritz, 13, daughters of a prominent Tucson surgeon, were recovered last week after the same informer had led officers to the scene.

Miss French, according to Tucson police, said in a written statement that she, Saunders and Schmid took Alleen to the desert. The statement said Saunders and Schmid led the victim away from the car and beat her with rocks until she died.

The girl said she heard Alleen screaming. Shortly afterward, Schmid came back for a shovel and Miss French followed him to the body. After burying the body, the three left the site.

No motive has been disclosed by police.

PERSONAL DEBT IN A CONSUMER ECONOMY

Buy now, pay later has become a fixture of American family life in the "soaring '60s." The long, uninterrupted business expansion, now in its 58th month, has been fueled by the readiness of consumers to assume a heavy burden of debt and of lenders to advance easy credit. But the voices of caution are beginning to be heard. In essence they warn that acceleration of personal debt has become so rapid as to threaten both the individual borrower and the soundness of the over-all economy.

Quality as well as quantity of credit is in question as retailers and lending institutions induce more and more consumers to go into debt on a wide range of goods and services. Will more purchases made on the "never-never," as the British refer to installment buying, actually turn out that way -- never paid for? While delinquency on installment loans has risen only slightly in recent years, other danger signals are visible in the high-flying consumer credit field. Not the least of these is widespread consumer ignorance of the true costs of buying on the installment plan.

Federal Reserve Board statistics show that American families are quite willing to go into debt to buy things they want. At the end of September, a total of $81.9 billion was outstanding in short - and intermediate-term consumer credit -- up $8.4 billion from a year earlier. Interest and other charges on this huge volume of debt cost consumers more than $10 billion a year.

Not included in the estimates of consumer credit are the mortgages outstanding on owner-occupied homes, which total nearly $200 billion. To some experts a total of $282 billion in combined consumer credit and mortgage debt seems staggering. William McChesney Martin Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has pointed to the current rise as one of the "disquieting similarities" between the present prosperity and that of the 1920s, which culminated in the Great Depression.

"In fact," Martin pointed out in an address last June, "the expansion of consumer debt arising out of both residential mortgages and installment purchases has recently been much faster than in the '20s." Other economic experts, however, point out that the outstanding consumer debt is buttressed over-all by more than $2 trillion in consumer assets. The assets take the form of fixed capital in homes and consumer durables as well as bank deposits, stocks, bonds, and insurance and pension reserves.

About half of all American families have some installment debt, but the burden is unevenly spread. About 10 per cent of all families, for example, lay out more than 20 per cent of their disposable income (income left after taxes(to meet debt payments. The Federal Reserve Board classifies such families as "heavily burdened borrowers." For the nation as a whole, 14.4 per cent of disposable income goes for repayments on installment debt--up 2.6 points in a decade. An otherwise optimistic Federal Reserve study of consumer debt states: "The continued upward drift in the repayments ratio is a matter of concern. Many families with debt have few or no liquid assets to fall back upon."

For the nation as well as for the individual family, consumer credit is a good servant but a bad master. Under the worst circumstances, a large number of loan defaults might trigger severe depression. Even assuming that loans are paid on time, excessive debt expansion can harm the economy. This is because installment buying puts a mortgage on future income. Thus it is argued that debt-fueled expansion will prove unsustainable as consumers become indebted to the point where they cannot afford to take on further obligations. As the saturation point is neared, so the reasoning goes, the economy will lose the stimulus of credit buying. Once the economy turns down, moreover, the slackening in business and decline in consumer incomes would lead to sharp increases in delinquencies and personal bankruptcies.

Such bearish views are not shared by all economists. Many believe the threat of excessive debt expansion has been overstated. They say the idea that there is some percentage of disposable income above which consumer repayments cannot safely go has been disproved. In their opinion, demographic changes alone--the growing number of "young marrieds"--guarantee continued growth in borrowings. Rising discretionary income (income left after basic expenditures) will provide both the will to buy on credit and the means of repayment. This seems to be the official view of the Johnson administration. It has made it clear in recent weeks that it does not favor high interest rates as a means of reducing demand for credit.

YULE CAKES IN ERIN

Many residents of Ireland dub Christmas Eve the "Night of Cakes". The nickname stems from an ancient December 24th tradition on the Emerald Isle of baking special Christmas cakes spiced with caraway seeds.

House of Representatives constitute a damnable outrage.

And that is understatement.

At a time when statesmanship of the highest order is urgently needed, House leaders of both political parties are indulging in political opportunism that would disgrace the seamiest precinct boss.

It truly is a case of Nero Graham and his sidemen fiddling while Missourians burn.

Slowly, slowly, surely the truth came out last Tuesday and Wednesday. The House leaders care not one whit what the majority of their colleagues think, or what the people of this state need and deserve.

The truth that became appallingly apparent simply is this:

The House leaders are determined by fair means -- or foul -- to circumvent the will of the House majority, the will of the Senate, the will of the Governor and, more importantly, the will of the electorate.

These petty politicians are determined to ram an unreasonable plan for realigning the Missouri House past all obstacles. No matter what the cost.

The Senate has been more than fair, more than patient, more than willing to compromise in any reasonable manner. Too patient. Too willing to compromise. Too sensitive to House demands and emotions.

In the opinion of many, the Senate retreated two steps too far backward in proposing the backstop methods of reapportionment by the State Supreme Court or appointment of a second redistricting commission.

We think they would have done well to stick firmly to the concept of an at-large-election if the Commission failed to do its job. That's the way it is done in the Senate. That's the way it should be done in the House.

We hope no Missouri voter is any longer willing to believe that the House leadership is acting out of public interest. They made unmistakably plain in rejecting all Senate amendments that they were acting in self-interest only.

How utterly ridiculous it was for Rep. Mel Carnahan, House majority leader, to stand on the floor of the House and candidly admit he could find no valid reason to oppose several of the Senate amendments.

And then follow this statement with a fervent plea that the House refuse to accept them.

By this blanket, headlong rejection, the Senate was placed in the position of not knowing which amendments the House really found objectionable.

Amendments by the other house are usually taken up one by one in the Assembly so a conference committee, if one is needed, can act efficiently. That is what should have been done in this matter.

Carnahan is not the only puppet that has been manipulated in this farce by House Speaker Thomas Graham. He has a Republican counterpart, Ronald Belt of Macon, who is so utterly lacking in comprehension of his duties and responsibilities as a legislator and as a minority leader as to join eagerly in the cabal.

The House forces that are using every trick to gain their ends act with much boldness because they have the impression Missourians neither understand nor care about the reapportionment issue.

More Missourians than they would believe do understand the issues. And are much concerned.

We urge these citizens to make their concern known to legislators.

If the Senate falters, if the Press relents, if the people fail to act strongly and immediately, reapportionment problems will disturb the political life of this state well past 1970.

STUFFING THE TURKEY

Groceries cost more these days, and the Thanksgiving meal will be no exception. By one estimate (Wall Street Journal, Nov. 8), a family of four will pay nearly $7 for turkey and the trimmings this year -- up about 5 per cent from last year. A 10-pound turkey that cost $4.50 at retail in 1964 will cost about $4.90 this year. Such trimmings as green beans, pumpkin, and wild rice are costlier than in 1964, but cranberries are unchanged.

Agriculture Department statisticians say growers will raise 104 million turkeys this year, up from 99.7 million in 1964. Population growth presumably is absorbing some of the increased output and putting pressure under prices. And more of the birds are being processed into new boneless "roasts" and other ready-to-eat forms that cut into supplies.

Sidney Margolius, a consumer expert for Steel Labor, says the best buy in turkey this year is the larger bird. Turkeys over 16 pounds are running about the same price as last year. Toms over 26 pounds actually sell for a bit less than last year. Margolius advises against buying frozen prestuffed turkeys because the consumer ends up paying a turkey price for stuffing that includes a large percentage of water. Mom also is advised that canned and frozen candied sweet potatoes cost twice as much as fresh.

AUGUST EMPLOYMENT GAINS

While the unemployment for workers as a whole remained at the July level of 4.5 per cent in August 1965, the lowest level since October, 1957, the job picture improved in August for Negroes, teen-agers, blue-collar workers and those who had been unemployed for a long time.

In August the unemployment rate among Negroes at 7.6 per cent was somewhat less than double the white rate of 4.1 per cent. It had been considerably more than double the white rate in July and in most months of the last two years. The teen-ager rate declined from 13.2 per cent to 12.4 per cent; blue collar workers from 5.5 per cent to 5 per cent.

An example of this progress in Negro employment is shown in General Electric Company's publication, "At Work in Industry Today," detailing 50 case reports on Negroes at work, and how they earned their jobs in industry.

QUESTIONABLE REMEDY

No one with good sense minimizes the unemployment problem, which has been a sore spot for years and threatens to become worse. But some of the proposed solutions would in all probability, result in graver problems still.

One is found in the position of major labor groups. To quote the New York Times, which certainly cannot be called anti-labor: "Thus far labor's only basic remedy for unemployment is the synthetic one of a 35-hour work week to be established through Federal legislation . . . such a cut in work schedules would merely drive up costs and thus make it harder for American goods to compete in domestic and world markets. Moreover, it is a retreat from the fuller use of our materials, manpower and productive facilities when poverty remains a crucial challenge in large sections of our own country and even larger sections of Asia, Africa and Latin America."

To impose new and higher costs on our production machinery, at a time when competition for markets and consumer acceptance grows more and more intense, would be to invite the worse sort of troubles. And it would invite more, not less, unemployment.

OUR DISFRANCHISED CITIZENS

In 1960, eight million Americans were, in effect, disfranchised. They could not vote for President. That startling point is stressed in a Saturday Evening Post editorial. An American Heritage Foundation study is the authority for the figure.

The reason for this is that our election laws have not kept up with modern mobility. Millions of citizens change their state of residence every year, often for compelling business reasons. Conditions are vastly different from the old days, when it was commonplace for families to stay in one community for generation after generation.

The Post remarks, "State legislatures can remedy this situation by shortening the residence requirements -- they range up to two years in some states -- and by permitting citizens who have recently moved to vote by absentee ballot in the states they have left. Fifteen states have taken steps to correct this injustice. The rest should follow suit."

A "TAX OUTRAGE"

In a recent issue, Railway Age published a lengthy special report on "Tax Outrage". That's a strong phrase -- but none too strong for the case in question.

This particular outrage deals with the discriminatory taxation levied against railroad property in 24 of the states. In one year, says Railway Age, this discrimination resulted in the incredible total of $112,979,417 in overtaxation.

Without going into the complexities of the issues, in the magazine's words, "The heart of the problem is assessment of rail property at a higher value than it actually has." As a specific example, it tells of one railroad which discontinued certain of its car shops some years ago. It had to sell, for $500,000, property which had been carried on the tax rolls at $1,500,000. Then, to add insult to injury, when the new owner took over the property the tax authorities lowered the assessment to a mere $300,000 -- just a fifth of the figure at which it was carried under railroad ownership.

It is significant that the late President Kennedy, in his transportation message of 1962, which is spoken of as an historic document of its kind, emphasized that discriminatory taxation is among the greatest problems the railroads face, and urged remedial action.

The railroad goose that lays golden eggs is being slaughtered. Its case for tax equality for railroad property -- like all other property -- is overwhelmingly strong.

FOR REEL FUN

As millions of American fishermen take to the streams and lakes this spring, a good percentage will owe a portion of their pleasure and success to a quiet 49-year-old Minnesota businessman.

Lloyd Johnson is living proof that the Horatio Alger tradition still flourishes in America. Fifteen years ago, he was an expert machinist, working for a wage. Today he is president and owner of Johnson Reels, Inc., one of the leading American producers of quality fishing reels and rods. Products carrying his name are used in every state and overseas.

Like most American success stories, this one happened thru a man's determination to make something work better. Just after World War II, American servicemen had returned from Europe enthusiastic about the fishing potential of the European fixed-spool, open-faced spinning reels. With them, ultra light lures and line could be used and backlash was eliminated.

But while these early spinning reels were being hailed as the answer to every fisherman's problems, some anglers were learning that they, too, had annoying traits. One of these was Mr. Johnson, who put his inventive genius to work. The result that came out of his basement workshop was the closed-face spinning reel, a typically American improvement on the original spinning reels.

The first and succeeding Johnson Reels enclosed the line-carrying spool with a cover and fed the fishing line through a hole into the rod guides. This feature eliminated many of the exasperating tangles that wind or miscasts could inflict on the spinning fisherman. And with simplicity as his keynote, Mr. Johnson introduced a thumb button to release and stop line action.

This was the first of a number of innovations the Minnesota inventor contributed that have become standards for American fishing tackle. Through licensing arrangements, even competitors use many of his basic patents.

So anglers around the world who may enjoy today hours of effortless casting without infuriating birds' nests to untangle owe a nod of appreciation to a Minnesotan named Johnson.

FABIANS AND FANATICS

Before the turn of the century, Fabian socialism began to permeate the United States, proceeding primarily through Harvard. American Fabians established the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, which later became the League for Industrial Democracy and spawned the Americans for Democratic Action.

Such ISS members as Walter Lippman, Felix Frankfurter, Roger Baldwin, Harry F. Ward and Stuart Chase achieved public prominence.

John Kenneth Galbraith was a leader in establishing the theories of Fabian Socialist John Maynard Keynes as the standard for economic thought in American education.

In all their endeavors, the Fabians have worked toward the same objective sought by the Marxian socialists of the Communist Party: a socialist America. And they have worked alongside the Marxists in many instances.

How well the Fabian strategy for undermining American society has worked is evident in the current disorders plaguing our university campuses. The part played by professors in misguiding the rioting students attests to the success of the Fabian penetration of faculties. And the most radical groups involved in the fomenting of the riots, the DuBois Clubs, are named for one of the pioneers of Fabianism in America, W. E. B. DuBois (Harvard, 1890), who was also a member of the Communist and Socialist Parties and the ISS.

A New York Legislature Inquiry in 1920 found that Lippman and Frankfurter, who managed to become special assistants in the War Department in 1917, used their influence to aid left-wing conscientious objectors during World War I. The "objectors" were radicals who refused to support "any war under the capitalist system." It appears that the same sort of influence continues to aid leftist "objectors" today. HLH

NEW YORK (AP) — Omar Sharif, the most famous film sheik since Rudolph Valentino, thinks it is time the public let him down off his camel.

The young Egyptian-born actor, who won an Academy Award nomination for his portrayal several years ago of Sheik Ali in "Lawrence of Arabia," remarked:

"Many think I always wore robes and rode a camel. This is untrue. I hardly ever saw a camel before except on a cigarette box.

"It's hard to shake the image created by your first success. Most of the time one doesn't succeed in shaking it. But that is better than to have to try to shake the image of your first flop."

Slender, still in his early 30s, Omar is good-natured, somewhat shy in manner. As Michel Shalhoub, son of a Syrian lumber importer, he was reared in Cairo and graduated from an English college there. A year later he turned to acting after he found the lumber business left him with a wooden feeling.

He made a couple of dozen films in Cairo, became a star in the Arab world, and married Faten Hamama, Egypt's best-known actress. They have a son, Tarek, 8.

He picked the name Omar Sharif — which means "the honorable Omar" — because of its sound. But when he first appeared on the "Lawrence of Arabia" sets, Irish actor Peter O'Toole objected:

"Nobody could be called Omar Sharif. I'm going to call you 'Cairo Fred.'"

The nickname stuck.

"Orientals are violin people," he remarked. "They are emotional and sentimental and self-indulgent.

"In Egyptian melodramas your success was judged by how much you could make the audience cry. Since then I've had to learn emotional restraint — to realize that the most moving thing is not someone actually crying, but someone who wants to cry and is fighting it."

Sharif, a cultured man who speaks six languages, said that as an Oriental he had met with some difficulties in adjusting to the Western tempo.

"It is so speedy," he observed drily. "I try to sleep as long as possible because it is the slowest thing I know.

"An Oriental, as long as he has food enough for this day, neither works nor worries about tomorrow.

"But I suppose speed is necessary in the large cities of Europe and America because life there is so tough and competitive. If you don't keep at it, someone will take your place."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The Rio de Janeiro foreign ministers conference, opening today, finds most of the Democratic leaders of the Western Hemisphere lined up against the United States, the military dictatorships behind us.

It also finds American policies in Latin America more on the spot than at any time since the 1920's when we landed Marines in Nicaragua, on top of earlier Marine landings in Haiti and Santo Domingo.

Much of the anti-American sentiment which will be voiced in the Rio conference results from the personality and policies of Tom Mann, the President's Texas friend whom he made Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs, and later promoted to be Deputy Under Secretary of State.

On one occasion, President Johnson called in a group of Latin American ambassadors and, in an informal chat supposed to be strictly confidential, tried to sell them on Tom Mann. He described Mann as a brilliant, dedicated, but misunderstood individual.

The Latin ambassadors went away still "misunderstanding" Mann. The President made no impression on them whatsoever. They regard Mann as too military-minded, much too quick on the draw, and a bad influence around a Texas-born president also inclined to shoot from the hip.

The two chief issues to be debated at the Rio conference will be:

1. The removal of the OAS headquarters from Washington so it won't be under the domination of the United States. This will probably fail.

2. Blocking any future Pan American police force. This will probably succeed.

For the first time in history a Pan American police force is operating in the Dominican Republic, and, although it was hurriedly thrown together in order to take the curse off the American military occupation of that country, it could become an important precedent for Pan American stability and for use in revolt-torn countries.

If, for instance, Cuba should kick out Castro and a government vacuum exist there, the United States would like to have a Pan American police force which could be thrown in to restore order.

Such nations as Mexico, Chile, and Uruguay, however, are gravely suspicious of any Pan American army. They regard it as a concealed arm of U.S. militarism. The debate over it will be hot and heavy at Rio de Janeiro.

The appearance of two new missiles in the Soviet anniversary parade doesn't alarm American observers. One is a mobile ICBM launcher; the other could fire a nuclear warhead from orbit.

U.S. observers suspect that neither is more than a prototype, probably intended to mislead the West. They recall how the Red army fooled them 15 years ago by showing off new bomber models while secretly producing intercontinental missiles. The Pentagon took the bait and diverted most of its money into bombers instead of missiles. As a result, Russia got the jump on the United States in the missile race.

American experts claim the two new Soviet missiles aren't as effective as weapons already in the American arsenal. This time, the Pentagon won't divert money from its present programs to build orbital and mobile launchers. The Russians themselves aren't expected to build more than a few showcase models as they did with those new bombers 15 years ago.

The accumulation is so tremendous the Defense Department has no way of delivering it without impairing vital military shipments.

Lindsay's Future -- Most professional politicians disagree with newspaper speculation that John Lindsay could use the mayor's office as a springboard to the White House. Furthermore, he must work with a city council that is predominantly Democratic. The problems are more likely to overcome Lindsay, the politicos claim, than the other way around.

Bailey Worries -- Democratic National Chairman John Bailey, worried about Republican gains in the big cities, is planning a massive campaign next year to hold onto the congressional seats that the Democrats won in the 1964 election. 775 Attend Final Session Of Convention

An audience of 775 attended the final session of a three-day convention of Jehovah's Witnesses held last weekend in the American Legion Hall.

The peak attendance came as Bruce E. Giffin, district supervisor for the Witnesses in the mid-South, spoke on, "What Does the Resurrection of the Dead Mean for You and Yours?"

Mr. Giffin said, "The resurrection is a teaching unique to the Bible. No other books that are considered 'holy' by large religious bodies teach the resurrection."

He said that the resurrection of the dead "is not far off because Bible prophecies like Revelation 11:15-18 are being fulfilled and this shows that the resurrection is at hand."

According to local presiding minister, Russell Knauer, the gathering here was a precedent-setting one.

"In addition to assembling for the convention sessions we used much of Saturday and Sunday mornings and afternoons calling on residents here in Sikeston encouraging them to intensify home Bible study. Hundreds of Witnesses participated and we can safely say that Sikeston has seen its greatest house-to-house Bible teaching campaign," he said.

Mr. Knauer said this was the second time since 1963 that the Witnesses used Sikeston as a convention site.

FREE! THE STORY OF POPE PAUL VI

Vicar of Christ— The Pilgrim Pope

From St. Peter to Pope John XXIII, of course, the Papacy has played a historic role in human affairs.

But never before has a Pontiff of the Church stirred the imagination and interest of the whole wide world as does the present Pope—Paul VI.

He is the first Pope since St. Peter to return to the Holy Land — to the sites made sacred by the life and passion of Jesus. The first in 525 years to meet personally with a Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church ... the first ever to visit India ... the first to set foot on the soil of the United States.

Even more historic, however, is the Holy Father's apostolate for spiritual unity and good-will among all the followers of Jesus Christ ... and for renewal within Christ's Church to meet the challenges of the modern world. Leaders of all faiths are aware, of course, of the Holy Father's aims and his dedication to this great Christian cause. But the rank and file of all Christians should similarly understand ... and we've put a thumb-nail story of Pope Paul into a free pamphlet you can read in a matter of minutes.

It is the story not only of Paul the priest, the Cardinal and finally the Pope, but of the world-wide society of the faithful over which he presides as the Vicar of Christ, the successor of Peter, "the servant of the servants of God."

Although his predecessor, Pope John XXIII, instituted the move for Christian unity, this little story reports the dedication of Pope Paul to the same purpose in these words voiced before he became Pope: "The first action of the apostle must be that of presenting to the world an admirable, attractive Christianity. The first testimony will be that of our unity, our mutual love, our interior cohesion. The second will be that we love those whom we wish to evangelize ... It is not a conquest but a service."

Whatever your church affiliation may be ... and even if you belong to no church at all ... the quest for Christian unity will affect your world, your life, your family. And you should be interested in what Paul VI — the Vicar of Christ — is doing about it. Write today for our free pamphlet No. MO-40. It will be sent promptly, without obligation. And nobody will call on you.

Gifts Abound For Yule

By SALLY RYAN
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK -- A sugar plum factory, a leather hippotamus and helpful hints on how to spend a million dollars -- there is something for everyone in the Christmas catalogues this year.

Even Neiman-Marcus, the Texas store with dollar-studded ideas, boggles at the possibilities presented by what is shaping up as a record Christmas spending spree.

The store worked its way through a sheepskin-covered mechanical horse; $150; his and her para-sails - "an amazing, ascending nylon parachute that goes from the surface up" for $361 apiece; a five-foot long rustic wagon with a polyfoam mattress, $145; and pink champagne pancakes, $8.

Then it set out to offer some help on how to tender a little affection--say a million dollars worth. On a woman, of course.

You start with $300 lace handkerchief, thumb through a few baubles such as a $465,000 diamond necklace, the usual sable, chinchilla and limousine, a $450 umbrella with a genuine blonde tortoise handle, a 25-day Aegean cruise with your nine dearest friends, an 18-karat gold needle for $15, and still end up $101,787.38 short of the goal.

"A little loose change to fritter away, in case we've forgotten something," Neiman-Marcus advises.

Stores across the land will be glad to help you fritter away the change. Their Christmas catalogues already are in the mail.

Abercrombie & Fitch Co., the sportsmen's spot in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, opens with Alaskan polar bear skins, "subject to availability," for $975, and has handsewn leather footstools for hunters -- a 68-inch hippo or rhinoceros, $450.

At F.A.O. Schwarz, the Fifth Avenue toy store, there is a lollipop factory, complete with conveyor, cooker, pushbutton automatic ingredient dispenser, mixer, molds and lollipop sticks, $15.

If money is no object, how about:

A Colt Paterson belt pistol, with flared walnut grips and folding trigger, Abercrombie & Fitch, $9,500.

A pointe Milan lace tablecloth, Plummer-McCutcheon, $1,500.

A life-sized tiger, Schwarz, $295.

A seven-room dollhouse with a real electric ceiling light in each room and a stone terrace, Schwarz, $125 unfurnished, $233 furnished.

There are the usual whimsies.

Lord & Taylor, New York Department store, has a thermometer holding a ballpoint pen "for his torrid love letters to you and his irate protests to the papers" $8; and a tipsy musical poodle $9.

Back at Neiman-Marcus, there is a cocktail crutch for incapacitated elbow benders, complete with an ash tray, glass holder, pillbox, key chain, and, ahem, a little black book, $20.

For Republicans, there is a life-sized LBJ beagle, Schwarz $25. "The choice of chief executives," the catalogue says. "Reinforced ears for that presidential lift."

For the horse player, there is an automatic handicap, Abercrombie & Fitch, $6. "Handicapper won't guarantee the winner, but it automatically digests vital statistics, rates every horse in an average race," the catalogue says.

For spies, a toy U2 plane with a camera is perched in the Schwarz catalogue, ready to soar hundreds of feet and take an automatically timed secret picture in flight, $13.95.

The catalogues are loaded with games.

For future statesmen, there is Diplomacy, with a 1914 map of Europe and instructions to try to deal or double deal your way to control of the continent $7.50.

Finally there is "squander," billed as a game for born losers $3.95.

Asks Equality For Emerging Countries

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—A noted visitor from India suggested today the industrial nations of the world must learn to treat the developing nations as fellow citizens.

A U.S. specialist in foreign affairs suggested hard-bitten negotiations between nations which extend financial help and those which receive it.

They stated their ideas in connection with the 10th National Conference of the United States National Commission for UNESCO.

K. S. Sundara of India, an executive director of the World Bank, said many of the developing nations have talent and resources but do not have the the money to develop them.

"My country, one of the poorest, gets about a billion dollars a year in aid from the western world," he said in an interview. "If that were stepped up to 1½ billion, we could be independent of aid in five to seven years.

"It's like the difference between giving a starving man enough to stay alive and giving him enough to get the strength to get up and walk."

He contracted the average income of $3,000 in the United States with $90 in India.

Dr. Luther H. Evans, former director general of UNESCO, made his comment about hard-bitten negotiations in the keynote speech of the conference last night.

He said the problem facing world leaders is to identify the things which need to be done and give a push to social development. He suggested this might be accomplished through negotiations on the terms of foreign aid.

"This would give a high moral standing and aid in the stability of donor-recipient relationships which at best are a bad kind of relationship — easily corruptible and capable of developing bad attitudes," he said.

Dr. Evans is director of the international and legal collections at Columbia University in New York and is a former librarian of Congress. He was director general of UNESCO from 1953 to 1958.

He said the rapidly growing population is one of the toughest problems the world faces and difficulties over trade are certain to arise.

"We are up against starved economic power in its rawest form," he said. "The greedy profit motive will be a great handicap."

Dr. Thomas F. Malone of Hartford, Conn., director of research for Travelers Insurance Co. and past president of the American Geophysical Union, was elected chairman of the commission.

Social Security Stuffers Available

CAPE GIRARDEAU - A small leaflet prepared by the social security administration, is available to employers as a payroll check stuffer. The leaflet explains the increase in the social security contribution rate and amount of earnings on which the tax is paid, set for Jan. 1, Paul J. Palmer, social security district manager in Cape Girardeau, announced today.

The leaflet shows how these increases will affect a worker's take home pay; how his contribution helps finance retirement, survivors, and disability insurance benefits; how they will pay the costs of the hospital insurance part of medicare; and why they are necessary.

Employers may get in touch with the social security district office, located at 612 Broadway, Cape Girardeau, Mo., for more information about the leaflet.

"We can provide employers with a supply of these informative leaflets without charge," Palmer pointed out. "But," he added, "the supply is limited and employers should make their requests early."

Economy Picks up Steam

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy is picking up new strength at the halfway mark in the final quarter of the year.

And the hullaballoo over aluminum prices — even the temporary breakdown of electric power in the industrial Northeast — is likely to add to the tempo on the final weeks of the year — if for no other reason than the rush to catch up after the disruption and uncertainty of the first two weeks of November.

The statistics of the economy seem sure to be fatter at year-end — both in dollar volume — influenced by rising prices--and in unit volume.

Copper prices are going up as supplies tighten. Part of the push behind prices in this metal is from political uproar in production centers in South America and central Africa, forcing world prices higher. Much of the rise in the United States is due to increasing demand for metal.

Steel production is taking a tentative step upward again. It had been lagging since a labor settlement early in September ended fear of a strike. This sent customers to living off of stockpiles built up as a precaution.

Auto production is booming, and so are sales of the new models. Most people see this as assurance that public confidence in good times ahead is strong — and that consumer spending still is free wheeling.

This should assure record retail sales in the weeks just ahead. It's the season of greatest activity for most merchants.

And personal income totals continue to rise. High employment and higher wage scales are helping. There's also a boost from such sidelines as stock dividends. Payments are at a record so far this year. And the first yearend extras signal a record outflow of cash from corporate coffers to shareowners.

Rising prices here and there will give a misleading glow to some of the statistics reckoned in dollars. This inflation, so far mild, colors the reports of the economy in general. But the big boost still is in the actual unit volume — the rising total of goods, the increased number of persons at work.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Do I love Thee?
I fed a hungry lamb today
And helped a lost one find his way.
Do I love Thee?
Once I planted a little tree
Whose future boughs will not shade me.
Do I love Thee?
I prayed with a dying friend tonight
Until he found eternal light.
Yes, I love Thee!
Our live for Thee increases
When we give it away in small pieces.

Sking And Heart Health

By Merritt H. Stiles, M. D.

Dr. Stiles, president of the United States Ski Association from 1961 to 1965, is a former vice president of the American Heart Association and Chairman of its Council on Clinical Cardiology. He makes his home in Spokane, Washington.

If your heart yearns for the highlands at the flutter of the first snowflake, you are not alone. Almost three million Americans took to the ski slopes last season, and the sport's popularity is growing by leaps and slaloms.

While I would not recommend skiing for persons who have a serious heart condition, I do advocate it enthusiastically as a way to keep physically fit. And keeping physically fit helps protect against heart disease.

In fact, I sometimes wonder whether, if everyone started skiing in early childhood, and continued on with skiing or some other strenuous exercise on a year-round basis, there might not be a dramatic drop in the incidence of heart attacks.

The key word here is year-round. The year-round sedentary male who goes in for strenuous exercise on his vacation can get into trouble.

But even if you don't start skiing young, it's still worth a try. I myself only took up skiing at the age of 55. My first ski lessons quickly convinced me that skiing was by far the most enjoyable sport I had ever tried. I soon discovered also that, if I meant to ski actively during the winter, I had to keep in top physical condition the year round. As a result, 10 years later, I am in far better condition than I was at 55 -- all thanks to skiing.

Let me emphasize that you should not undertake a strenuous sport like skiing in middle life without first getting an okay from your doctor. Make a date for a physical examination; it's a good idea even if you change your mind about venturing onto the ski slopes. And remember, your doctor may give you a green light even if you do have some type of heart trouble, provided it is under good control.

Next, get yourself in shape through a conditioning program, best continued year-round. Get suitable equipment and learn how to adjust it; sign up for instruction -- and you're set to go!

If you go from near sea-level to a high altitude ski lodge, take it easy at first -- for a few days if possible -- to acclimate yourself to the thin air and adjust to the high altitude. Remember you will be calling on your heart to work harder than usual supplying oxygen to meet the heavy demands of strenuous exercise. Skiers who leap too abruptly from their sea-level swivel chairs to high altitude ski trails run the risk of developing acute and even dangerous respiratory conditions.

And don't overdo. Skiing, particularly on difficult terrain, when fatigue has impaired timing and coordination, may cause trouble even for the young and vigorous in body and spirit. A recent survey of skiing accidents near Anchorage, Alaska, showed that the highest percentage of injuries occurred in the late afternoon, and that the most "accident-prone" were men under 20. It's wise to stop before you get tired. And it is wise to forestall afternoon fatigue by a midday lunch and rest period.

Now for some specific advice on how to minimize spills and sprains:

1. Get into condition to ski through a planned conditioning program, including stair-climbing, hiking and running.
2. Get equipment that fits properly and learn how to adjust it. Wear non-elastic Arlberg-type safety straps to avoid runaway skis. Beware of loose clothing and long hair when riding lifts or tows, especially rope tows.
3. Skiing does not come naturally. Take lessons from a qualified ski instructor, and continue your lessons at intervals until you have become a competent skier.
4. Pick trails and slopes that match your skills, for safer skiing and more fun.
5. Ride lifts and tows with care. Follow posted instructions.
6. Keep your ski tips up. Carry ski poles by the shaft or with straps in your palm, not over the wrist.
7. Stay clear of the skier ahead. When passing close to another skier, call out: "On your left," or "On your right."
8. When you stop or take a spill, look uphill before you start again. Fill in any holes made by your fall.
9. When skiing into a trail from the side, yield right of way to the skier who is coming down the trail.
10. Keep trails clear. Move to the side when you stop.

If you will follow the skiers' ten commandments faithfully, if you will persevere with your conditioning and instruction programs, you will find the greatest sports enjoyment you have ever known, and you will be doing yourself -- and your heart -- a favor.

U.S. Relies On Military Triumph

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — At this stage of the Vietnamese war the United States is counting primarily on military successes rather than diplomatic appeals to persuade North Viet Nam to enter into peace negotiations.

A fresh bid by U.N. Secretary-General U Thant for concessions from all sides in the conflict to promote the prospects for peace failed today to arouse any outward enthusiasm here.

Administration officials said the United States is ready to talk but they see no interest in talks now on the part of the Vietnamese Communist leadership.

The current visit to Moscow by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, a close associate of President Johnson, may produce some U.S. peace approach to the Soviet government. Officials here will not say what — if any — instructions Mansfield had from Johnson on this point.

But they do expect that if Mansfield urges Soviet peace pressures on North Viet Nam, which is receiving Soviet military aid, he also will stress Johnson's determination not to yield South Viet Nam to Communist conquest.

The fact is, however, that U.S. policymakers are generally pessimistic about the outlook for negotiations at this time. They believe the North Vietnamese and guerrilla leaders in South Viet Nam, though their confidence of victory may be shaken, are not yet persuaded they face eventual defeat.

There is some opinion here, moreover, that the war may never end in a negotiated settlement. Those who think this is a serious possibility say that after a time the fighting may simply die down as larger areas come under control of U.S. and South Vietnamese forces. North Viet Nam, according to this theory, could just quietly give up the struggle.

American strategy is now aimed at progressively destroying or wearing down the Communist military forces on the ground in the South and wrecking their morale, while maintaining aerial bombardment of targets in the North. An important new element of this strategy apparently is to press offensive operations against the North Vietnamese regular troops in the South wherever they can be found.

The big battle this week in the Ia Drang Valley of South Viet Nam, near the Cambodian border, is said here to fit into this pattern. U.S. strategists reason that if American and South Vietnamese forces succeed in destroying crack units from North Viet Nam, they will shake the very foundations of Communist confidence and move the conflict closer to conclusion.

The United States now has 160,000 troops in South Viet Nam and is building up to 200,000 as an immediate target with no limit on increases beyond that point.

American military leaders and civilian policymakers have been persuaded for some weeks at least that the weight of American numbers and massive firepower have turned the tide of battle against the Communist forces to the extent that the United States and South Viet Nam are no longer losing the war and may be beginning to win it. Concurrent with this evident change in the military situation there has developed a greater political stability in South Viet Nam.

The situation is roughly the reverse, militarily and diplomatically, of what it was a year ago when Thant advised Washington through then Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson that North Viet Nam was willing to send an emissary to Rangoon, Burma, for a secret meeting with a U.S. representative.

That bid for talks was rejected mainly because the United States felt itself to be in a weak position.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is reported to have decided after studying the Thant report that the North Vietnamese probably were interested in a meeting because they wanted to tell the United States directly that it had to withdraw from South Viet Nam before there could be peace negotiations.

Rusk and other officials are also said to have been concerned about the possibility that the North Vietnamese might use the fact of the talks to undermine morale in South Viet Nam by claiming that the United States was negotiating for peace behind the back of the Saigon government.

But the main consideration in the autumn of 1964 — when Vietnamese policy was involved in the presidential political campaign — is reported to have been that in many ways the United States was in a weak position to go into any kind of talks with North Viet Nam without strong evidence that the enemy was seriously interested in an actual peace settlement.

The situation began to change last February when Johnson ordered the bombing of military targets in North Viet Nam for the avowed purpose of cutting down on the flow of reinforcements and arms to the Communist forces in the South.

The change was speeded up when Johnson subsequently began the massive reinforcement of U.S. troops in South Viet Nam.

Johnson halted the bombing attacks for five days last May. Administration officials said later that word was sent to North Viet Nam that the pause was created deliberately to afford an opportunity for peace probes.

But the Vietnamese neither then nor at any other time during this year's escalation of the war showed any interest in getting into negotiations.

Long and Mrak At Dedication

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Sen Edward V. Long, D-Mo., and Dr. Emil Mrak, chancellor of the University of California's Davis campus, will be the speakers at the Nov. 22 dedication of the University of Missouri Environmental Health Center.

Long will be the luncheon speaker. Mr. Mrak will speak at 2 p.m. in the student union auditorium.

The center will foster university - wide coordination of research and training activities concerned with the relationship of the health of man to his environment.

A bakery co-worker complained it was unfair that he had to pay extra union dues because he was only 18. When I asked what he meant he said, "Look at the bottom of this notice. It says, "If delinquent, add two percent."

Sears To New Store

Sears, Roebuck and Company's catalog sales store relocates Thursday with a new store in the Midtowner village shopping center. The opening will be at 9 a.m.

The new location will give the store an additional 2,000 square feet of floor space.

The space will permit display samples of additional merchandise.

The new building provides 5,300 square feet of space.

More than half will be devoted to sales and the balance to other facilities, such as the credit department, general offices, storage areas and automotive service shop.

The interior has been painted in pastel shades. Modern lighting and air conditioning are provided to make shopping comfortable.

"The steady growth in Sikeston and surrounding area has demanded that we increase our facilities here and Sears policy of keeping pace with the growth of the cities in which it has stores has lead to this relocation," Clifford Collier, store manager, said. "We hope to provide our customers with faster and more efficient service."

Begin Trial of $71,000 Civil Suit

ST. LOUIS -- A federal district court judge Monday began hearing testimony in a $71,000 civil suit growing out of transactions handled by convicted Memphis commodities speculator Landon V. 'Jimmie' Butler of Memphis.

That amount is sought by attorney John D. Hux of Sikeston, receiver for the bankrupt Federal Grain Co., Inc., of Morley, from a New Orleans brokerage firm, Kohlmeyer & Co.

Hux contends Butler engaged in unauthorized and illegal transactions with Kohlmeyer by misappropriation of federal grain funds. The soybean transactions also involved Butler-managed accounts for Best Gin and Land Co. of McMullin, and Henning Tenn., Grain Co., the receiver said.

Federal Judge John K. Regan is hearing the case without a jury.

Butler's attorneys Friday filed a motion with the eighth circuit court of appeals in St. Louis for a stay of his 10-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine, pending an application for a hearing on his conviction before the supreme court.

The eighth circuit court on Nov. 4 denied Butler's motion for a rehearing of that panel's Sept. 16 decision upholding the 52-year-old Memphian's conviction.

Butler has been free on $50,000 bond since a federal district jury at Cape Girardeau found him guilty Nov. 21, 1963, for interstate transportation of stolen grain and of checks stolen, converted or taken by fraud. This grew out of his activities as a federal grain consultant in the fall of 1960.

matter of fact

A fjord is a long narrow arm of the sea extending inland, resulting from the inundation by the sea of a severely glaciated valley. Many fjords are astonishingly deep. Sogne Fjord in Norway is 4,078 feet deep. Messier Channel in Chile is 4,167 feet deep. Fjords are characteristically U-shaped valleys, with the lower, slanting part of the U underwater. Walls of fjords often rise vertically for hundreds of feet from the water's edge.

Geminis to Travel Inches Apart in Space

HOUSTON, Tex. AP -- Gemini 6 and Gemini 7 will travel inches apart on their rendezvous next month if the goal of Manned Spacecraft Center engineers is achieved.

An official who asked not to be named told newsmen Tuesday that the engineers hope the spacecraft will maneuver to one to two feet apart and then fly in formation.

The closest previous figure used by spokesmen for the center was 10 feet.

Gemini 7, a 14-day mission, is scheduled for launch Dec. 4. Nine days later, on Dec. 13, Gemini 6 will be launched into the same orbit.

Gemini 6, a two-day mission, was postponed Oct. 25 when a rendezvous pod failed to orbit.

Legislatures Do Poor Job Remapping

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A Virginia educator Tuesday called state legislatures "the most inappropriate of all bodies" to reapportion themselves because they have too much self interest to do a good job.

Paul T. David, chairman of the University of Virginia department of government and foreign affairs, told a workshop at the National Municipal League that a relatively small state constitutional convention with its members elected by the state at large should do the redistricting.

He also suggested redistricting should be "as nearly automatic as possible" and subject to judicial review by state and federal courts.

St. Louis County Supervisor Lawrence Roos told another session that local officials must make sacrifices in public apathy, which holds back successful intergovernmental cooperaton, is to be overcome.

"Most people just don't give a hoot until something breaks down," he said. Local officials, he said, must give up certain prerogatives in the interest of better area wide government.

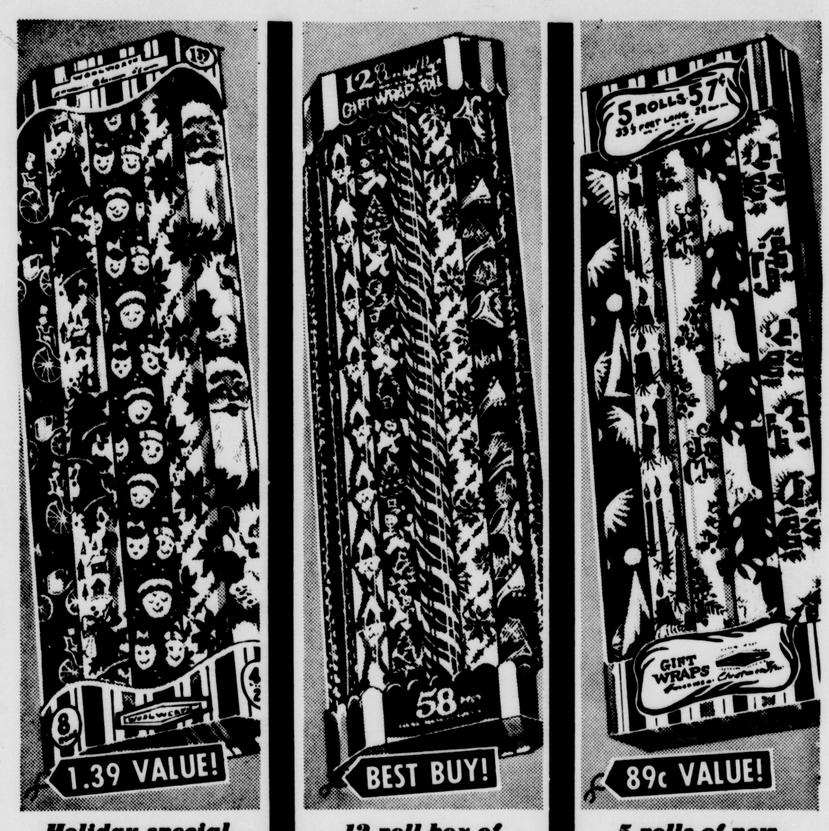

Roos also called on state legislatures to give local government a greater degree of home rule.

During an inspection at Fort Dix, New Jersey, a lieutenant discovered a young GI's laundry bag full of books. Since he was a stickler for having everything in its proper place, the lieutenant dressed down the guilty private in grand style. When he was just about out of breath, he demanded, "By any stretch of the imagination can you justify having your laundry bag full of books?"

"Yes," the private said. "They're dirty books, sir."

Announcement was made last Thursday that Secretary of Agriculture Jardine had approved the recommendations of the joint highway board, meeting in Chicago, appointed to mark out a comprehensive system of interstate and national automobile routes and to devise ways to mark the routes. According to the system as designated by the highway board and approved by Secretary Jardine, Sikeston is located at the intersection of two of these national highways. One of them is No. 61, a route extending from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico and the other Federal highway, passing through Sikeston is No. 62, of which State Highway No. 16 is a part.

State Highway Commission Approves 1966 Highway Oiling Program

At its November meeting in Jefferson City, the Missouri State Highway Commission gave its approval for oil surface treatment to 1,189.8 miles of Secondary (farm to market) system routes during the summer months of calendar 1966. These improvements will extend into all sections of the state and will cost an estimated $2,141,640.

This 1966 oiling program furthers the State Highway Commission's effort to provide additional "dust-free" surface highways for Missouri highway users.

The work includes sections with an average daily traffic count of 70 or more vehicles per day, a decrease from this year's requirement of 75 vehicles, along with a few gaps and short isolated gravel sections.

The actual application of the oil treatment to the routes will not be done until next spring and summer since this type of improvement is a warm weather operation. The Department's district maintenance crews, however, will during the winter months prepare the roads by grading, ditch cleaning, stabilization work, etc., so that the actual application of oil can move forward at the earliest possible time next year.

Routes scheduled to receive oil surface treatment during 1966 by district, county, route, mileage and location includes:

DISTRICT 10, SIKESTON

BOLLINGER: Route 0 -- 3.1 miles from Route A north to present oil; and Route VV--2.3 miles from Route M, north.

CAPE GIRARDEAU: Route U--3.5 miles from Route N north to present oil; Route 00--4.2 miles from Route HH south to present oil; Route F--1.2 miles from Route Z to Route PP; Outer Road -- 0.2 mile at Interstate Route 55 and Route 74; and Outer Road -- 0.7 mile at Interstate Route 55, U. S. Route 61 and Route 34.

MADISON: Route C-- 2 miles from Route FF west to Iron county; Route E--6.1 miles from Route T southwest to present oil; and Route MM -- 1.2 miles from 72, north.

MISSISSIPPI: Route KK - 2.1 miles from Route JJ, south; and Outer Road -- 1.2 miles at Interstate Route 57 and Route B.

NEW MADRID: Route U -- 1.6 miles for balance of Route.

PEMISCOT: Outer Road --0.7 mile at Interstate Route 55 and Route D.

STODDARD: Route BB-- 4.2 miles from Route K to Route M; and Route 00 -- 4 miles from Route 25, east.

WAYNE: Route Z -- 13.9 miles from Route D to Route P; Route FF -- 3 miles from Route U southeast to Kyles; Route V--7.9 miles for balance of route; and Route BB-- 5.3 miles from Route D, south.

THE ART OF BUYING MEAT

Knowing the correct way to buy meat is important for any group of consumers, but most of all for low - income groups. They cannot afford -- either economically or nutritionally - to neglect such an important part of their diets and budgets.

Catherine Nawn, marketing specialist with the Livestock Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service gives the following tips on how to stretch meat dollars by using U.S. grade names.

Beef is chosen for cut and purpose as well as by grade.

For instance, if a pot roast is planned, there is no need to buy a top grade cut. A lower grade chuck roast, say U.S. Good, properly prepared can be tender, flavorful and just as nutritious as a Choice grade one, and it will be less expensive.

Prime and Choice grades are fine for steaks or special occasion meals, but they are economically out of reach of most low-income families. The lower grades are less expensive, and when prepared properly, can be tender and juicy. U.S. Good, Standard, and Commercial, for use in stewing, in ground meat dishes and other casserole meals can make mighty good eating.

As guidelines to quality, USDA grades assure the consumer his best meat buy. If used in a practical program of meat purchasing, these grades can prove invaluable to the low-income consumer.

Asks Transfer To Work on Appeal

TOPEKA (AP)—George Gessner, a former soldier convicted of passing nuclear secrets to Russia, is seeking transfer from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth to the Johnson County, Kan., jail on the grounds he would be better able to work with his attorney in preparing an appeal.

Vance Collins, U. S. marshal for Kansas, testified in U.S. District Court Tuesday that his office had elected to keep Gessner at Leavenworth for the prisoner's own safety and because of top secret information in Gessner's mind.

Collins said it was felt Gessner should be protected from other prisoners because they look down on a man who has betrayed his country.

In an appearance before the court last week, Gessner charged he had been physically assaulted by guards in the penitentiary. He said that on one occasion his clothes were ripped off him by prison guards and that he was thrown into a "stripped" cell. He said a bruise on his arm had been inflicted by a guard on Nov. 2.

The hearing was on a habeas corpus action by Gessner, asking that the court order him to be held at a county jail pending outcome of his appeal from a life sentence for turning atomic secrets over to the Russian embassy in Mexico City.

Officials said Gessner has elected not to begin serving his sentence pending outcome of his appeal. As a result, he is technically in custody of the marshal's office.

Judge George Templar reserved ruling on the motion and asked attorneys to prepare suggested findings of fact to aid in reaching a decision.

Sinatra Gets Off Easy

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — From the preliminary skirmishes, one might have concluded that CBS in its documentary program on Frank Sinatra had a tiger in its schedule. When seen Tuesday night, however, it emerged as a nice little pussycat of a show.

Sinatra came off as talented, hard-working, generous, warm, family-loving, rich, responsible, witty and loyal. In portions of an interview with Walter Cronkite -- the one he had sought to have withdrawn from the program -- he explained that his reputation for a quick temper and ready fists related only to one incident in which he was provoked to action.

He complained, without apparent bitterness, about "ridiculous accusations and statements that I was consorting with mobsters and gangsters."

The well-publicized Sinatra romances were glossed over. His first wife, Nancy, appeared with him in some recent film. Mia Farrow's name was mentioned but once — by Sinatra to illustrate his problems with the press. It was in connection with a magazine picture showing them together, with Sinatra making a gesture, which, he said, was misinterpreted by a caption writer.

There were a few suggestions that Sinatra might have a few faults. At one point Cronkite said "he has often done things only an understanding friend would forgive," but no understanding friend appeared to supply chapter and verse.

The strongest criticism of the singer came from his daughter, Nancy: "When you have a daddy, you kind of want him to be a daddy all the time. And sometimes, when he's with his friends, they carry on like a bunch of kids. And it's great they're having a marvelous time, but that bothers me a little."

We saw daddy and his friends having a marvelous time doing a benefit performance. Cronkite explained it was just part of their appeal — making the audience feel that what Sammy Davis, Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra were doing on stage to amuse them were the same things they do off-stage to amuse each other.

The program was interesting enough as a sketch but it dug no deeper than an article in a fan magazine and it is certainly hard to figure out why Sinatra got the wind up about the show. He came out of it looking about the size of Paul Bunyan.

A crowd had gathered outside the cage of the mother orangutan and her new baby at New York's Central Park Zoo. Each time the tiny monkey tried to limb about the cage, the mother nonchalantly reached out with one of her paws and pulled the baby back.

"Just look at that big ape!" one woman said to her friend. "Doesn't she have a contented look on her face?"

"Why shouldn't she?" her friend retorted. "She's got what every mother would like to have -- four arms!"

25-Year Service In R.E.A.

JEFFERSON CITY -- James C. Stephenson, Vernon Buck and DeWint Zaricor were honored Thursday night at the 28th annual membership meeting of the Missouri State Rural Electrification Association.

The Scott-New Madrid-Mississippi Electric Cooperative employes received certificates recognizing their completion of 25-years service in the rural electric program in Missouri.

These certificates, presented at the annual meeting banquet at which Sen. Edward V. Long spoke, read:

"In recognition of 25 years of dedicated service to the rural electrification program."

Stephenson, manager, lives at 314 Kramer Drive, Sikeston. Zaricor, assistant manager, lives at 501 South New Madrid, Sikeston. Buck, line superintendent, lives at 333 East Kathleen, Sikeston.

Stephenson has completed 29 years in the R. E. A. program beginning on survey work building lines in 1936 at Palmyra, and has had continuous employment in R. E. A. since.

Zaricor began working for his father, former manager of the Sikeston R. E. A., in 1940. He has worked 25 years for the R. E. A. in different assignments since 1940, with the exception of time spent in the South Pacific during World War II as a fighter pilot in the air corps.

Buck, line superintendent for 18 years, has worked in different jobs from groundman to lineman to line foreman to line superintendent with time out only for World War II service in Germany.

Crisis Atmosphere Vanishes from Ike

FT. GORDON, Ga. (AP) — Most of the atmosphere of crisis has — like the oxygen tent — vanished from around Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Both could return. But as of Tuesday the former president was portrayed as putting in a relatively active day for a 75-year-old man only a week past a heart attack.

The five-star general was described by an Army spokesman as reading Westerns, chatting with his wife and aides, and signing and dictating a few letters.

Doctors disclosed that the general had not been under oxygen since sometime Saturday. He had been in and out of the tent intermittently.

The oxygen tent may be as much symbolic as an actual measure of the general's progress. Eisenhower has resorted to bottled oxygen off and on since his 1955 heart attack at Denver. He even carried the equipment in his car when traveling.

There were other signs of relaxing tensions.

The ranks of the small army of newsmen, photographers and radio and television technicians have thinned out.

Maj. Gen. Walter B. Richardson, commander of the fort which has thrown its resources in to help the general in his battle, was able to take some time out to give a lecture to newsmen on the fort's normal role in training soldiers.

A sergeant who had seemed to live in rumpled fatigues ever since Eisenhower was brought to the hospital here a week ago showed up Tuesday night decked out in a blue blazer sport coat and white shirt for an evening off.

So far there has been no reported effort by the doctors to have the former president sit up or get out of his bed a couple hundreds yards from the Ft. Gordon golf course.

The Eisenhower family hopes to be together for Thanksgiving at Washington's Walter Reed Army Hospital. But the doctors said Tuesday they have no plans yet for transferring Eisenhower to the hospital in the capital.

World's longest mountain range is a submarine ridge called the Mid-Atlantic Cordillera. The range, covered by water averaging a mile in depth, stretches 10,000 miles and separates the Atlantic Ocean into eastern and western basins.

The Puritans may not have been as puritanical as is sometimes thought. They feasted for three days on the first Thanksgiving Day in 1621 . . . although they included prayers in the celebration.

American Football League Reschedules Player Draft

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The wheeling and dealing has started but it looks like this year's crop of college football stars will have to wait at least until Nov. 27 to begin their post-graduate courses in economics.

Or will they?

Strongly criticized by college coaches and officials across the country and faced with the possibility of a boycott by some college conferences, the American Football League backtracked Tuesday night and rescheduled its player draft for Nov. 27, the same day the National League will hold its draft.

The AFL had planned to draft on Nov. 20 and get a week's jump on buttonholing its prospects and protecting them from the NFL's so-called "baby-sitting tactics," which the younger league claimed had kept its clubs from reaching and signing draft choices.

But there were recurring reports that the AFL had jumped the gun on its original Nov. 20 date and already held a secret draft.

The Dallas Times Herald, Atlanta Journal and New York Daily News all reported that the AFL clubs had met and divided up the college stars and one AFL executive, Gerald H. Phipps, president of the Denver Broncos, disclosed that the owners had gathered in New York two weeks ago, "not for any secret draft, but to learn as much as we could about the draft prospects."

Wayne Valley, co-owner of the Oakland Raiders, also said that the AFL owners had met informally two weeks ago and added:

"I know the NFL is meeting today (Tuesday) in Pittsburgh. I don't know what they're doing, but I imagine they're discussing the probability and acceptibility of various players with the various teams in their league. This is what we did a couple of weeks ago."

There was no immediate comment from any NFL source to Valley's comment.

Commissioner Joe Foss, who announced the AFL decision to delay its draft one week, emphatically denied the reports of a premature draft and implied the story was planted by the rival NFL.

"It's an annual affair for them to break such a story, and it always comes out of National League cities.

"There has never been anything to the story in the past and there is nothing to it again this time. It's entirely false, without a word of truth," Foss said.

The pro leagues have no signed agreement with the National Collegiate Athletic Association on draft dates, but the NCAA had strongly urged that they draft no earlier than Nov. 27, final playing date for most college teams.

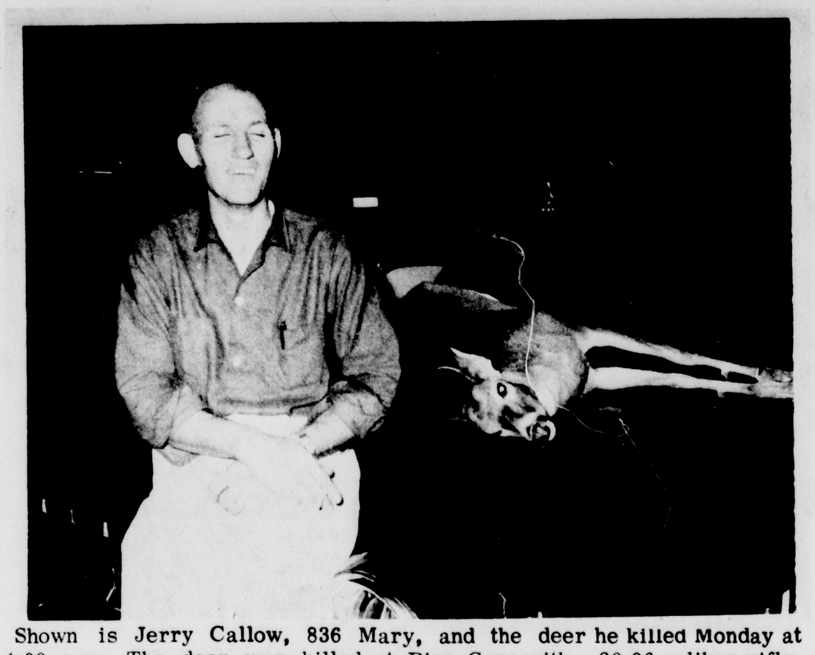

The AFL had justified its Nov. 20 date by claiming that last year NFL scouts had resorted to "baby-sitting tactics" to keep prospects away from the younger loop.

Foss, in his statement announcing the change in dates, said the AFL had decided to draft early "to combat this questionable practice, which has involved the hiding out of dozens of college players in order to prevent AFL teams from negotiating with them.

Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the NFL when asked to comment on Foss' statement, said:

"The AFL has breached the public trust and that of the nation's colleges with secret early drafts at least three times in the past five years, including one earlier this month. The NFL developed a program of field representatives to minimize the number of premature signings resulting from such unethical drafts.

"We do not feel required to further defend a recruiting program simply because it is more straightforward, better organized and effective than the practices employed by our competition."

DUFFY'S DUO—There are many reasons why Duffy Daugherty's Michigan State Spartans are enjoying a fine season, including fullback Bob Apisa, left, and quarterback Steve Juday.

Big 8 Football

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Walt Garrison, Oklahoma State's rugged fullback, made his bid for another Big Eight rushing championship the hardest way possible, with a 121-yard gain against unbeaten Nebraska.

Garrison almost won the game with an 18-yard bolt to the Husker 5 on the final play, and Bob Devaney, Nebraska coach, called him "the best fullback I've ever seen in the Big Eight."

His big game put Garrison within range of Missouri's Charlie Brown, who lifted his league-leading total to 779 with 96 against Oklahoma. Brown leads by 104 yards, but the catch is, Brown has one game left against Kansas while Garrison has two, K-State and Oklahoma.

Garrison needs 208 yards in his last two games to join the Big Eight's select list of backs with 2,000 yards rushing for a career. This means 104 yards a game, but don't count him out. He has averaged almost 106 his last four games. He won the crown with 730 last year.

Tim Van Galder of Iowa State took over the Big Eight passing lead with 1,163 yards and the total offense lead at 1,342 with his 344 run-pass yards against K-State, the second highest in league history.

Colorado's Bernie McCall is second in passing with 1,032 and in total offense at 1,269. Fred Duda of Nebraska is third with 924 total offense.

Other rushing leaders are William Harris of Colorado 638, Frank Solich of Nebraska 574, Harry Wilson of Nebraska 512, Carl Reese of Missouri 479, Les Webster of Iowa State 459 and Ron Kirkland of Nebraska 450.

In pass receiving, Nebraska's Freeman White has 458 on 28 catches, six for touchdowns; Eppie Barney of Iowa State 411 and Tom Busch of Iowa State 359 on 23.

Missouri's Gary Lane tied Frank Rogers of Colorado for the scoring lead at 48 points. Lane also moved within 12 yards of 3,000 career total offense, reached by only seven players in conference history.

Other leaders are Larry Wachholtz of Nebraska, 442 in punt runbacks; Ossie Cain of K-State, 349 in kickoff returns and Bill Lynch of Kansas, 42.3 punting average.

In the team figures, Nebraska still leads in rushing offense at 285.1 to Missouri's 240.6; in total offense, 403.2 to Colorado's 301.1, in rushing defense 104 to Missouri's 115.3 and total defense, 199.8 to Colorado's 231.5. Van Galder's spree moved Iowa State to the lead in pass offense at 129.2 yards a game. In pass defense, Iowa State also leads.

Around the Big Eight training camps, Missouri coach Dan Devine was worried about the flu and Kansas coach Jack Mitchell about injuries.

Four Missouri players have the 24-hour flu, three of them offensive left guards, headed by starter Mike Eader. The coach fears it may spread. Russ Washington, big end, took the cast off his knee, but he's questionable.

Mitchell said several of his injured men may be able to play a little in the 74th annual battle "but I wonder how long they'll last?"

K-State tackle Willie Jones is doubtful for Oklahoma State. Colorado is in good condition for Air Force and Iowa State is ready for New Mexico. Nebraska and Oklahoma have an open date Saturday.

Bowl Roundup

Conference championship showdowns Saturday in the Southwest and Far West will fill vacancies in at least two -- and probably three -- of college football's major bowl games.

The bowl picture, which began to take shape with commitments by third-ranked Nebraska Orange, No. 8 Missouri Sugar and Georgia Tech Gator last weekend and top-ranked Michigan State's formal Big Ten send-off to the Rose Bowl Tuesday, could be virtually completed after this week's games.

The host berths in the Cotton and Rose classics will be on the line when second-ranked Arkansas takes on No. 9 Texas Tech at Little Rock for the SWC title and Southern California, No. 6, tackles UCLA, No. 7, at Los Angeles for the Pacific Athletic Conference championship.

The SWC runner-up is assured of a Gator Bowl invitation, with Texas Tech having already made a conditional acceptance.

The only remaining openings are single spots in the Cotton, Sugar and Orange bowls -- and fifth-ranked Alabama appears to have a lock on the Orange berth opposite Nebraska. Southeastern Conference stalwarts Tennessee, Kentucky, Auburn, LSU and Florida all are possibilities for the Cotton and Sugar bowls and Syracuse also has been mentioned.

COLUMBIA, Mo. - The coma into which Branch Rickey lapsed when he had a heart attack is in its fourth day.

The Boone County Memorial Hospital reported his condition unchanged and still critical today.

The 83-year-old organizing genius of major league baseball collapsed Saturday night at the speaker's stand as he acknowledged his election to Missouri's Sports Hall of Fame.

He has not regained consciousness and has been in the intensive care section since his arrival at the hospital.

Wilt Chamberlain

Wilt Chamberlain, the $100,000 star of the Philadelphia 76ers, can reach another milestone in his fabulous pro basketball career at Cincinnati tonight.

The 7-foot-1 Big Dipper, as he prefers to be called, needs to score 33 points against the Royals to become the second highest scorer in National Basketball Association history.

Now in his seventh NBA season, Chamberlain has a career total of 19,217 points, 32 short of the 19,249 Dolph Schayes tallied in his 16 NBA seasons. Schayes now is coach of the 76ers.

Bob Pettit of the St. Louis Hawks, who retired after last season, his 11th in the NBA, is the league's No. 1 all-time scorer with 20,880 points.

Chamberlain closed in on Schayes' total with 30 points Tuesday night as he rallied the 76ers to a 107-98 victory over St. Louis, their fifth straight. New York routed Detroit 120-95 to snap a four-game losing streak in the other game of the double-header at New York's Madison Square Garden.

John Havlicek's 20-foot jump shot in the last 15 seconds gave the Boston Celtics a come-from-behind 108-105 victory.

Accounted For 85 Deer

Eighty-five deer were accounted for at the Poplar Bluff checking station of the Missouri Conservation Commission at the close of hunting hours yesterday.

The opening day total included 60 bucks and 25 does, according to Conservation Agent Chester D. Barnes who supervises the checking of deer here. The checking station is operating at the Poplar Bluff District Ranger Station of the Clark National Forest, located on Highway 67, north, at Maude street.

A total of 3,976 whitetailed deer were reported killed by hunters over the state Monday, opening day of the week-long gun season. The total was 1,503 less than on the first day of the season last year.

The kill included 2,762 bucks and 1,214 does. On the same day last season, hunters killed 3,507 bucks and 1,972 does.

The Conservation Commission said the lower total apparently stemmed from a change in regulations in many northern Missouri counties whereby bucks only are legal this season, whereas any deer was legal last year.

Benton County in west central Missouri had 247 kills Monday to lead the state. Texas County, in the deep southern Missouri Ozarks, was next with 189, and Ozark County, further south, recorded 175.

Former President of Ireland Dies

DUBLIN, Ireland AP -- William T. Cosgrave, 85, third president of the Republic of Ireland, from 1922-32, died Tuesday. Cosgrave, a nationalist once sentenced to death for his part in the 1916 Easter Rebellion, was a pioneer in the Sinn Fein movement. He was born in Dublin.

NEW YORK AP -- Alexander King, 66, artist and author who became nationally famous after frequent appearances on television, died Tuesday of a heart attack. King, who was born in Vienna and came to the United States just before World War I, had written eight plays and six books.

SILVER SPRING, Md. AP -- James A. Slingluff, 53, administrative manager of the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory, died Tuesday after a brief illness. Slingluff, who recently suffered a heart attack, had been with Johns Hopkins since 1947.

Death Claims Famed Magician HarryBlackstone

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The era of great enchanters who made millions thrill, wonder and gasp in amazement drew closer to its end with the death of famed magician Harry Bickstone.

The man whom many in the theater world called "the last of the great magicians" died at his home Tuesday night at 82. He had been bedridden since August with pulmonary edema.

His death ended a 60-year career in what Blackstone termed the science of misdirection. "Magic overcomes frustration," the spellbinder once said. "It doesn't need to be sleight of hand. It's nothing but pure psychology - applied in the right place."

Born Harry Bouton in Chicago, he turned professional at 16, forming the Boutor. Brothers act with his younger brother Peter.

The cast grew until, during the 1920s, he commanded a cast of about 40. Blackstone's career reached its height during World War II, when millions of servicemen took in his show at the U.S.O.

Blackstone retired six years ago, returning once to the public eye in the television show "This Is Your Life." Four years ago he moved from New York to California.

He leaves his widow, Elizabeth, 65; a son, Harry Jr., and his brother, Peter Bouton, of Colon, Mich.

Captain Says He Last Off Ship

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The Greek captain of the Yarmouth Castle says he left his sinking ship in a lifeboat, but returned to help the passengers and was the last person off.

Of his crew, many of whom had criticized him, Capt. Byron Voutsinas, 33, said:

"They did everything possible, even giving their own lifejackets to passengers.

"That means you give your life to someone you have never seen and will never see again. They were a brave crew."

The Coast Guard added four names to the list of those missing, raising the toll to 85 passengers and two crewmen missing and one man known dead in the disaster that struck the Yarmouth Castle, full of Nassau-bound vacationers. The vessel, carrying 550 passengers and crew, burned and sank about 60 miles northwest of her destination.

Cmdr. George Treffs of the Coast Guard added to the missing list Florence and Joseph Wright of Pompano Beach, Fla., and Pauline and Warren Tomasini of San Luis Obispo, Calif.

Voutsinas, who had made no public statement since his ship went down Saturday, appeared at a news conference Tuesday.

He said: "The condition of the ship was perfect. It had all the (safety) equipment and it all worked perfectly.

"I did not see anyone abandon ship by himself; they (crew members) were helping passengers. Everybody did what they were supposed to do."

Nine Killed in Crash Of Turkish Air Force Craft

ISTANBUL AP -- A Turkish air force C47 transport crashed near Ankara Tuesday night, killing all nine occupants.

Officials said the cause of the crash was not immediately determined.

The plane had taken off from Diyarbakir, in southeastern Turkey, with five army passengers and a crew of four. It crashed shortly after receiving landing instructions from the Ankara control tower.

PARIS AP -- France's presidential race lost a candidate today, but another filed just before the list closed Tuesday night. The field still stands at six.

Paul Antier, a supporter of agricultural interests, said he felt there were too many candidates and withdrew.

The new candidate was Marcel Barbu, 58, a former member of Parliament. He has no well-defined political learnings.

President Charles de Gaulle is considered certain to win.

LONDON (AP) —Unemployed truck driver Kempton Bunton doesn't think it's right that Britons should have to pay 5 pounds ($14) a year for a television license to support the BBC.

So he took a $392,000 Goya portraint of the Duke of Wellington from the National Gallery and said for nearly four years he tried to ransom it to buy television licenses for the poor and needy.

Last May he tipped off a London newspaper that the painting was in a railway station checkroom. Police found it undamaged. Bunton, 61, turned himself in two months later.

A jury found him innocent Tuesday of stealing the painting because he intended to return it. But it found him guilty of stealing the picture's frame which he had abandoned in a rooming house. Judge Carol Aarvold sentenced him to three months in jail.

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP)— U.S. Ambassador Edward Clark turned the first sod today for a rose garden to be built in an Adelaide suburb as a memorial to the late President John F. Kennedy.

French Tell Of Viet Nam Peace Offer

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) — News commentator David Schoenbrun says he was informed by a ranking French government official that the North Vietnamese ofofered to begin unconditional peace talks with the United States during last spring's six-day moratorium on bombing in North Viet Nam.

The offer, Schoenbrun quoted the official as saying, was contained in a message sent to the French government in Paris on the fourth day of the letup in bombing. It directed the French to tell the United States that North Viet Nam was ready to talk about a cease-fire and a peace settlement in South Viet Nam, he said.

Schoenbrun said the United States ignored the overture and resumed bombing raids on strategic points in North Viet Nam.

The U.S. moratorium went into effect May 12 for the avowed purpose of opening the door to possible peace talks. Bombing was resumed on May 18.

Schoenbrun, former Columbia Broadcasting System chief European correspondent based in Paris and London, made his remarks before a conference of bankers Tuesday night.

Reached afterward, Schoenbrun said he understood the offer was one of three advanced by Hanoi since last November. The first one, he said, came three weeks before the presidential election and the second two weeks afterward.

Star-spangled security

The millions of Americans who buy U. S. Savings Bonds know security is a two-way street.

You and your family are only as secure as the country you live in. When you start saving with U. S. Bonds you insure your own future and help keep your country strong at the same time.

Bonds give you a guaranteed rate of interest—3¾% when held to maturity—so you don't have to worry about the ups and downs of market trends.

And Savings Bonds aren't subject to state or local income taxes, either. If you like, you can defer the federal income tax until you cash your Bonds.

When you buy your Bonds you can't help feeling a little proud. You're doing your part in strengthening the cause of freedom.

And that's the best security in the world.

Overrun by Viet Cong

DA NANG, South Viet Nam AP -- A Viet Cong battalion overran a government district headquarters 28 miles south of Da Nang today and Vietnamese sources said casualties among the 150-man garrison were heavy.

The Viet Cong were reported to have left several victims impaled on stakes. A government official who flew over the headquarters said he saw no sign of life.

About 500 Communists attacked the headquarters, at Hiep Duc.

It was not known whether U. S. Army advisers were in the headquarters at the time. However, most government - held district towns have advisory teams of five Americans.

Suedekum Oran's Man Of Year

ORAN - Clarence Suedekum, presiding judge of Cape County Court and acting chairman of the Cape Girardeau Chamber of Commerce Wholesale and Manufacturing Committee, presented the Community Leadership Award to Liston Mitchell Jr. at a meeting of the Oran Chamber of Commerce Monday night.

Mitchell, named the Man of the Year, has been active here in the Little League, the chamber and the Oran Park Board.

He helped plan the Oran Homecoming and is now serving as the president of the Lions Club.

Mitchell was born in Jackson, was graduated from Sikeston High School and worked in credit companies in Sikeston and St. Louis before coming here to work as an assistant cashier at the Oran State Bank.

Oran is one of 10 cities cooperating with the Cape Girardeau chamber's awards program. Similar trophies will be presented in Jackson, Benton, Dexter, Illmo-Scott City, Advance, Marble Hill, Lutesville, Chaffee, Bloomfield and Delta.

A committee of judges from each of these cities will select their Man of the Year on outstanding characteristics in civic affairs.

Our neighbor has six lively sons, and her yard is always filled with youngsters active in ball games, bike races or fist-fights. One day her older boys set us a lemonade stand. The sign over the stand read: "Help Send These Boys To Camp." I suspect the whole neighborhood looked forward to the boys' vacation. Anyway, business boomed. But their mother was harder pressed than ever, her kitchen a mess of spilled sugar and lemon peels. The second morning she was out on a step-ladder, changing the sign to read: "Help! Send These Boys To Camp!"

Collins Out On Bond

CARUTHERSVILLE -- James Collins, 36, Caruthersville truck driver who has been held in Pemiscot County Jail since August 27 on a charge of murder by rape, has been released on a $25,000 bond approved by Circuit Court Judge William A. Ragland.

Collins was arrested following the death of Sue Melton, 23, of Memphis, Tenn., who was found on the Triangle Boat Club road the night of August 20 by a Caruthersville couple. Witnesses testified at the hearing that they had seen Collins leaving the Climax Bar with the woman earlier that evening.

Prosecuting Attorney Sharon J. Pate filed charges of murder by rape against him on August 27. Pate reported to a Daily Democrat staff writer Monday that the bond had been made for Collins and he had been released.

Pate expressed his opinion that "the bond is not good." He said it was made out by the S & G Bonding Co. and carried the signatures of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gatewood, Caruthersville tavern owners, and Paul (Duke) Still of Steele. He explained that the initials in the bonding company name stood for the last name initials of Still and Gatewood.

Pate also reported that Sheriff Clyde Orton had returned to Collins his automobile which played an important role in the case of the state against the defendant because it contained material evidence needed to prove the guilt of Collins.

The trial date of the Collins case has not been set, according to information released by Pate.

An advertising agency with a cigarette account discovered a man in the Tennessee hills who had been smoking for 90 years. Since the veteran's 105th birthday was coming up, the agency sent a man South to explore the possibility of an endorsement.

"Ever been to New York?" the agency representative asked.

"Nope, but always meant to go."

"Ever been up in a jet plane?"

"Nope, Sounds like fun."

"Ever thought of staying at the Waldorf?"

"Say, that sounds right fine."

"Well," said the adman, "you and I are getting on a jet for New York. We'll put you in the best suite at the Waldorf, and on your birthday I'll call for you at nine and drive you to the studio. At ten a.m. sharp you'll be on television. What do you think of that!"

"Can't do it. Wouldn't be right.

"Why not?" cried the agency man.

"I don't stop coughing till noon."

Splinters Abound In Political Parties

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's more than just a wild and wooly time. It's a hodge-podge, left and right.

"Real squares. Old ladies up in the Bronx."

That's what some young radicals today call members of the American Communist party. The weekly newspaper, the National Observer, which quoted them, said they are equally contemptuous of liberals and labor unions.

But Monday the party thought it got a shot in the arm and talked of running candidates for office. But George Lincoln Rockwell, commander of the American Nazi party, has already said he will run for president in 1972.

The Ku Klux Klan is in business. The ultraconservative Minutemen talk of their secret "underground army."

Robert Welch, founder of the right-wing John Birch Society, says of the United States: "It's "one vast insane asylum" where "they've let out the worst patients to run the place."

The Communist party has splinter groups. Student groups have splinter groups. Even the Republican party has splinters.

But long after thousands of today's young radicals sag into middle age, raising families and buying homes between trips to the bank, the Communist party will probably be still here.

At least it has an ideology, although it changes with the wind, while many and probably most of the young radicals have only upset emotions and incoherence.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover considers the Communist party a "Moscow-controlled" menace and part of an international Communist conspiracy. He called Gus Hall, the party's chief spokesman, "Moscow-trained."

It was Hall who Monday, after a Supreme Court decision, got the idea that now the party could run candidates, although its claimed membership has dropped from perhaps 100,000 in the 1930s to 10,000 now.

The court held unconstitutional a provision requiring a party member to register as such with the federal government.

This was the reasoning: For failure to register he could be prosecuted and jailed. But if he did register, he could be prosecuted under another law which makes it a crime to belong to a group that advocates overthrowing the government.

Thus, if he registered, he would be risking incriminating himself under the other law. The court pointed out that under the Constitution's Fifth Amendment a man can't be compelled to incriminate himself.

In the 1930s — although the Communist party's part in it was very small — the great domestic crusade was to organize workers into unions. They joined in the millions.

Earlier this month, in a special story on the radical left among the young, the New York Times, picking out the Students for a Democratic Society as the "largest single radical student group on or around campuses," said that the SDS had "pretty much given up the working class as lost, having fallen prey to the union and the Democratic party." The Times says SDS claims 3,000 members, with 90 chapters around the country.

The National Observer, not limiting itself to student groups, said the new left places less emphasis on economic problems, more on "human freedom," and only a few splinter groups try to "out-Mao Mao Tze-tung."

Yet, the newspaper went on, "even a tiny splinter group possesses the capacity for mischief if it also possesses dynamite." Some groups are on a crusade against poverty and the war in Viet Nam.

FBI's Hoover says "the Communist party is today expending tremendous energy attempting to increase its influence among college students."

Missouri Press Report From Edward Long

Congress this year voted approval for programs which will help Missouri strengthen its outdoor recreational facilities.

At final count, Congressional appropriations to Missouri for outdoor recreation, fisheries and wildlife, and national parks totaled $8,841,213.

Missouri won a total of $5,444,492 for projects in the Clark National Forest, the Mark Twain National Forest and the new Ozark National Scenic Riverway.

Congress approved Missouri activities of the U. S. Department of Interior's Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife. This Bureau aids in provision of fish hatcheries, wildlife refuges, soil and moisture conservation, wildlife research and river basin studies. These activities won a total of $777,140 for fiscal year 1966.

Missouri's National Park Service areas won $752,050 in funds to expand and improve their outdoor recreation facilities. The George Washington Carver National Monument, the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, the Wilson's Creek Battlefield National Park, and the Ozark Scenic National Riverway are each included.

Altogether Congress voted over $4,000,000 to launch the new Ozark National Scenic Riverway. The Riverway includes 81,000 acres in Carter, Dent, Shannon, and Texas counties. This Riverway is a welcome addition to Missouri's beautiful outdoor recreation areas.

Missouri servicemen in Viet Nam will have fruitcake for Christmas this year thanks to "Operation Fruitcake" sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Downtown St. Louis.

A fruitcake will be sent by the club as a Christmas gift to all Missouri boys in Viet Nam whose names are sent in to my St. Louis office:

Senator Edward V. Long
Room 4039
Federal Office Building
1520 Market Street
St. Louis, Missouri

All parents, wives and relatives of servicemen in Viet Nam are urged to send in names and addresses. The Department of Defense has assured me that if the names and addresses are sent in promptly to my office, the fruitcakes will be delivered in time for Christmas.

President Johnson signed a bill to eliminate the red tape forced on lawyers who want to represent citizens before Federal regulatory agencies.

This bill, which I introduced in the Senate, sweeps away cumbersome and confusing regulations for attorneys practicing before Federal agencies. Also untangled by the law are the regulations under which Certified Public Accountants appear in behalf of taxpayers before the Internal Revenue Service.

Under this new law, citizens will be saved needless expense. It will also save time for lawyers, accountants, and Federal agencies.

Proposed Time Zones

In 1883, William Allen proposed a system of standard time. His idea, first accepted by railwaymen in Canada and the United States, resulted in designating American time zones as Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific, with the time in each being one hour slower than its predecessor.

Another Victim of Ratings

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Another victim of the ratings game quietly bit the television dust Monday. It will be mourned, partly for what it tried to bring to television but mostly for what will take its place.

The program scheduled for extinction is a high-minded interview show, ABC's "The Young Set." At an hour — 11 a.m. EST to noon — when the two rival networks are filled with soap opera and reruns of old Dick Van Dyke and Andy Griffith shows. Moderator Phyllis Kirk tried valiantly and often successfully to provide intelligent opinion and stimulating conversation.

Miss Kirk, whose television comedy series, "The Thin Man" is still playing around the country, brought together specialists and personalities ranging from dog trainers to Dick Gregory. This reporter once tuned in on a session in which a Protestant Episcopal bishop, a Catholic priest and an agnostic were in civilized and enlightening conversation.

"The Young Set" dies Dec. 17 and on Dec. 20 will be replaced by two half-hour game shows.

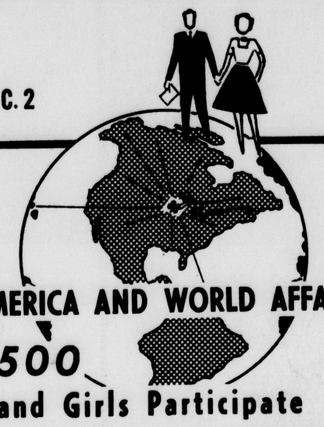

One, called "Supermarket Sweepstakes," will feature women bidding on items in stores. The winners will then be turned loose in a self-service store to scoop up as much merchandise as possible within a time limit.

The second, "Dating Game," will present eligible spinsters and bachelors after some sort of a computerized selection process.

CBS' "What's My Line?" producers have no immediate plans to replace the late Dorothy Kilgallen on the panel. For the next few weeks, at least, her spot will be filled by what producers Goodson and Todman call "members of the G-T family" — Betty White, Peggy Cass, Kitty Carlisle and Bess Myerson among them.

Recommended tonight: "Sinatra," CBS, 10-11 EST - documentary on the personal life and career of the singer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Washington, D. C.

Dear JC:

This is in reply to your most recent letter of the 7th inst. I am glad to hear from you again, and to know that you are out there in Arizona. I know you must be in a fine climate, for your condition. Back in 1916, when I was with the 11th U. S. Infantry, on the Border, at Douglas, Arizona, during Poncho Villa trouble, across the border there, in the State of Sonora, a town named Auqua Preieta, just across the border from Douglas. I remember when during the year or so that I was there, I used to do sentry duty, as a recruit, there at the international gate. It was always hot as heck during the day, and cold at nite; but I loved every bit of it, and felt better then, than I ever have since. I remember, before WW 1, when me and another fellow I soldiered with, used to go AWOL, catch a freight train, over the El Paso, & SouthWestern, and ride over to Hatchita, and Columbus, N. Mex; the place Villa raided and burned, killing many soldiers of the 13th U.S. Cav.; plus a lot of civilians. Incidently, I have a RR Spike, that was the last of its kind, a spike, taken from an almost empty barrel, it being the last one in it, taken from the back porch of the RR Depot there, while the raid was going on, by Albert Richardson, and George Lyon, both of Oran and Morley. Just before the raid by Villa, and his 500 or more bandits, Albert and George were put off the blinds, of the Golden State Limited there. Albert told me, that he grabbed the last spike in the barrel, just as Poncho Villa, was going across the tracks, at a crossing just about 50 yards west of the station. The time was sometime after midnight, March 9th, 1916. They ran and jumped off the platform and hid under some box cars parked on the house track behind the depot, and stayed there until all the yelling and shooting was over, and then they came out from their place of hiding and ran east of the tracks down in the yards where they stayed under another car, for about an hour, till, a freight train came along, in which they boarded; and then were back on their way to California. They had been washing dishes in a restaurant in El Paso, when they decided to go to Imperial Valley, to work in the early crop harvesting there, wherever it was. I had talked to Albert in Oran, sometime in the late spring of 1916, and we were talking about the Columbus Raid, and he showed me the spike, and told me of the Raid. He had it painted with immitation gold paint, and being a young guy at the time, I like the looks of it and admired it, and wanted to buy it off him; but he refused to sell it to me. It was not long after that, that I was washing dishes, myself, in a restaurant, in Chicago, in day time, and sleeping in Grant park, near the I. C. depot, on Lake Michigan front; when I decided on joining the Army. I was shipped as a recruit, from JB., and routed out of El Paso, to Douglas, Ariz., thru Columbus, and we all had the privilege of getting off the train, and viewing the destroyed business section of the town; before moving on to Douglas, and to the 11th U. S. Infantry, our permanently assigned organization; I landing in "K" Company of the 11th.

After World War 1, I wrote to Albert Richardson, who was 1st. Sergeant, of Co. K. 140th Infantry, 35th Division, and at the time was encamped at Fort Sill, Okla. And I continued to write to him, even after he and I were in France, although separated, and in different divisions. In our correspondence I asked him about the spike. And just before he was killed at Vouquois Hill, in the Argone, Spet. or October 1918, I received a letter from him telling me that he had written his mother about the Spike, and asked her to give it to me in case of his failure to return from France. And during the night that his body lay in the old Armory, at Morley, prior to his burial the next day, his sister, I don't remember her name, stepped up to me and handed me the spike, telling me that her Mother had asked her to deliver it to me. Thus, a wonderful jesture from an old friend, whom I'd took many drinks with, whose body then lay on French soil. He had paid the supreme sacrifice; in someways reminding us all of a much greater sacrifice paid by one, almost two thousand years ago; not only for freedom, but for life thruout eternity, for all mankind. I still feel today that Albert Richardson's body was not sacrificed in vain. He, like you, I listed as one of my best friends, and it was a great and treasured experience in having known him, and you too, until the day that we shall all meet in the Happy Hunting Grounds and can have the, possible, pleasure of downing a charge or two, and maybe another rusty bucket of beer from Metz saloon, with old Doc. Bassel, Press Rosenberry, and others who have gone before us, including Duce Smith, and some more people who like to partake of the great conversation watter.

I was very glad to get the clipping from your column, especially the one in which you eulogized me so highly, in which I wish to thank you very much. And when you get your book published, I should be very glad to receive a copy of. I am feeling very well; have my own private room here, and an Orderly assigned me to look after my room, and other personal matters that I request of him. And while hoping this letter will find you, still able to sit up and take nourishment, as usual. I beg to remain,

Your sincere friend,
Albert L. Brady,
P. O. Box 250,
USSH. Sta. 58.
Washington, D. C. 20315

P. S. Write when you feel the urge and I shall do the same.

The above letter was received by our good friend, J. C. May. Upon reading same, we thought it was a sufficient interest in our area that we asked him to allow us to reproduce it in our "Letters to the Editor" column. He has graciously given us his consent. We believe our readers will enjoy it.

Cape Hires City Manager

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The city manager of Minot, N. D., Paul F. Frederick, will become Cape Girardeau's first city manager Jan. 1, the City Council announced Monday.

Frederick, 42, a civil engineer, has been in his present job for 7 1/2 years and has been in the municipal field since 1946.

The council disclosed that Mr. Frederick's salary will be $15,000 per year.

State Action Asked to Solve Urban Problems

ST. LOUIS AP -- Three speakers warned the 71st conference of the National Municipal League that state governments must take the initiative and solve their own metropolitan problems unless they want increased federal intervention in state affairs.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri said the war on urban problems can be solved only if there is "the reform of state government and wide-spread acceptance of professionalism with government."

League President Alfred E. Driscoll, former governor of New Jersey, said local and state governments should be made more effective, efficient and responsible.

Former Kansas governor John Anderson said state governments must be revitalized to do their share in meeting the problems of the times.

"What are the implications for the future of democratic government if we cannot make democracy work at the state level?" he asked.

Reapportionment has put state government in a questionable position in the public eye, Anderson said. Most state legislatures, he said, were not apportioned according to their own constitutions.

Because of this and the greater ability and willingness of the federal government to attempt a solution of modern problems has put the future of state government in jeopardy, Anderson said.

State legislatures must be upgraded, he said, in order to increase the understanding between social groups of different economic and ethnic makeup. He specifically mentioned urban and rural populations.

Gov. Hearnes also called for a major reallocation of tax revenues, rather than more federal grant-in-aid programs. A vital need for a solution of urban problems, he said, is "a direct return of federal surpluses produced by the (federal) income tax to state and local governments."

Picasso, usually reluctant to finish a painting, once asked a museum exhibiting one of his works to put a sign next to it reading:"Don't touch. Painting still alive."

W. J. Jacob

Jacob Sales Manager

W. J. Jacob has been appointed an area sales manager for Gulf Oil Corporation's agricultural chemicals division, Byron M. Kern, manager of the division, announced in Kansas City.

He will be responsible for all sales of agricultural chemicals division products sold in Southeast Missouri, southern Illinois and western Kentucky. He will be located in the area sales office here.

"This new assignment is the result of consolidating all marketing personnel into one organization responsible for selling the complete line of fertilizers and agricultural chemicals," said Kern. "Extensive changes have been made in our sales force in order for us to efficiently meet the challenges of the rapid and dynamic growth of the fertilizer and pesticide industries.

"Previously, separate sales groups handled special products and the streamlining of marketing will enable each agricultural sales representative to provide more comprehensive and direct service to the customer."

A native of Wittenberg, Jacob is a graduate of the University of Missouri, Columbia, where he received a bachelor of science degree in agriculture. He has been associated with the fertilizer industry more than 15 years. He joined the agricultural chemicals division in 1962.

Jacob lives at 572 Park Ave.,

Armed Forces

Charles R. Long

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. - Airman Charles R. Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Long of R.R. 1, Bloomfield, Mo., has been selected for training at Lowry AFB, Colo. as an Air Force munitions specialist.

The airman, a 1963 graduate of Bell City High School, recently completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, Ark. -- According to Mr. Bertrand E. Shields, base civilian personnel officer, as many as 10 to 12 civilian employees may be hired for duty at Blytheville starting in January 1966.

The Air Force wide program will commence Jan. 1, and will be the first step toward the eventual replacement of 20,000 military personnel in the support areas.

Military personnel replaced will be shifted to support other requirements based on a study begun almost two years ago under Project Prime BEEF (Base Engineering Emergency Forces).

Prime BEEF is a long-range program which will identify the minimum number of military personnel required in civil engineering to provide the necessary mobility for Air Force deployment, a balanced state-side-overseas ratio, a greater degree of training and career progression and the military element required in the day-to-day work force.

Mr. Shields stated that the exact number of civilians to be hired at Blytheville has not been determined, but as many as 12 might be hired in January. He added that the hiring will be spread out between January and June.

Rebuilding of East Berlin

BERLIN (AP)—"The damned Russians," the old man said, leaning heavily on his cane. "They robbed us blind. And now our own Genossen (German Communist comrades) say they will rebuild all this in five years. I don't believe it."

The old man looked around the square in East Berlin between the bombed-out twin German and French cathedrals, where so far the Communists have rebuilt one pillar to keep the French cathedral's main entrance from falling down.

Elsewhere a wiry Communist party official outlined the regime's plan for a new Berlin. A glistening white plastic model of a new city center was at his elbow.

"It is important, that you see the naked truth," he told an American reporter. "That is all we ask."

The "naked truth" of East Berlin is hard to come by. The Communists speak solely in enthusiastic terms while people say very little of what they think.

The truth apparently lies somewhere between the pessimism of the old man and the optimism of the party functionary.

For the Communists, East Berlin has apparently become top priority, the place to put East Germany's best foot forward.

The year 1970 is their target date for completion of a facelifting. For years after World War II East Berlin has been a drab, sad city still largely in ruins in comparison with West Berlin.

A U.S. economic expert says: "The Communists have a real chance to accomplish what they have set out to do. They have taken a major decision to make East Berlin a showplace.

"Their economy is moving forward and for years now the Russians have quit taking everything the East Germans produced. The question remains, however, how good a job they can do, how long what they build will last, how good the workmanship will be. They still lack materials, as well as workers, and the workers still lack initiative.

"You might say there is much building in East Berlin but it is not what we in America would call a boom."

Nor are the lack of workers, materials and initiative the only problem the Communists face in trying to match what has been accomplished in West Berlin.

There is resistance among young people, even after constant indoctrination.

When three East Berlin policemen formed a circle around the writer, giving him a traffic ticket, a blond of about 20 walked by. He looked at the green - clad, booted cops, sneered and said, "Ihr Schweine you pigs."

The police did nothing.

For the casual visitor to East Berlin, the downtown area has changed considerably in recent years.

The area along the Berlin Wall near the Brandenburg Gate, has been spruced up although guards with submachine guns remain there.

A thick carpet of grass stretches down the street behind a neat wire fence, curving over a mound that denotes the bunker where Adolf Hitler died.

Unter Den Linden, leading into East Berlin from the Brandenburg Gate and once the most famous of German boulevards, again is graced by trees. New glass and steel buildings are interspersed with the restored opera house and Humboldt University and the mammoth Soviet Embassy. An automobile salesroom shows brightly hued Soviet-bloc cars.

There is speculation that when all is ready, the Communists will reopen the Brandenburg Gate as a crossing point for foreigners, thereby making it possible to usher them directly into the heart of what they want to see.

The Berlin cathedral is a massive, if cleaned up, ruin. Unlike the German and French cathedrals which the Communists say they will restore, the Berlin cathedral will not be rebuilt—"it is not a work of art and therefore not worth the millions of marks rebuilding would cost."

The cathedral dominates Marx-Engels Square. If it were rebuilt it would also dominate the heart of the new city center the Communists are planning.

In both halves of Berlin busy city planners are mapping out new streets, highways, bridges and rail lines that project into the other half of the city.

The hub of the projected Communist city center is to be old Alexander Square around which are grouped department stores now run by Ho, a giant, all-purpose, state-run store.

Ho's ads amuse the English-speaking observer because "Ho-Ho-Ho-Ho" posters appear beneath Communist flags.

Off Alexander Square the Communists have built brightly painted apartment houses and cultural buildings that represent a first step toward the all-German Socialist look that the Walter Ulbricht regime is trying to create.

Rents in the new East Berlin apartments average 130 marks monthly—about $32 at the East German rate of exchange.

East Berliners are better dressed, have more to eat and buy, than was the case a few years ago. But East Berlin as a capital leaves the impression of a police state, regulated by countless people in uniform.

Few Russians are seen in the streets, but thousands of Russian troops are just outside the city.

Leader of Grange Is Re-elected

TOPEKA, Kan. AP - At the National Grange meeting in Topeka last week, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman described Herschel D. Newsom, the Grange's national master, as "a tower of strength."

The description is fitting.

Newsom, 60, has been the 98-year - old farm organization's principal spokesman and authority for 15 years, and was re-elected Monday to another two-year term as its chief executive.

Freeman also paid tribute to Newsom's help in formulating government farm programs, one of Washington's most thankless taks, simply because of the impossibility to please all farmers, let alone all farm organizations.

It's understandable that the administration would turn to a moderate farm leader such as Newsom for advice.

The Grange, like himself, is "largely middle-of-the-road," as he puts it, standing between the conservative farmers who want no government regulation whatever and the liberals who want more.

Newsom said Monday he was hopeful for an eventual return of agriculture to free market practes and prices.

"But first," he added, "we have got to have sufficient checks to stabilize prices as the changes are made."

The 1965 Farm Act, he said, is a step in that direction. It breaks away from the traditional one-price structure for U.S. farm products that has discouraged sales abroad.

And its long-range effect, Newsome explained, would be to get the government out of the storage business which, in turn, would reduce production, restrictions, in operations since the 1920s.

"I'm not saying it can be done in a certain number of years," he said. "That depends on the rest of the world."

Newsom has been a farmer all his life, and held his first grange office when he was 6, as a junior grange gatekeeper.

He and Mrs. Newsom still call their farm near Columbus, Ind. home, but maintain residence in Washington, grange headquarters. The farm is operated on a crop-sharing basis with a long-time family employe.

Newsom learned the Grange under tutelage of his father, who also was an officer, and served his apprenticeship through the ranks. He was state master in Indiana 13 years before becoming national master.

He has a B.A. from the University of Indiana, where he graduated in 1926, and in 1960 was named a distinguished alumni.

One of Newsom's announced goals is a strengthened Grange membership. And the place to start, he said, is development of the junior grange. Newsom should know.

That was his own Grange starting point 54 years ago.

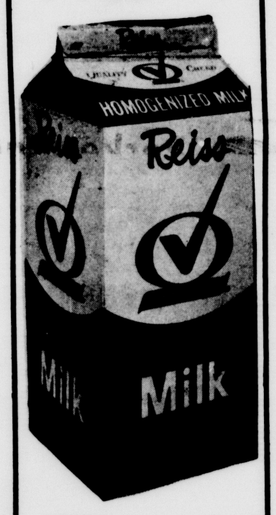

"California is a fine place to live in -- if you happen to be an orange."

Retarded Children Week Set

JEFFERSON CITY -- Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has issued a proclamation setting out Sunday through Nov. 25 1965 as retarded children's week in Missorui. The time coincides with national retarded children's week, according to announcement by the Missouri Association for Retarded Children.

The Governor's proclamation calls attention to the 5.6 million mentally retarded in the United States, and an estimated 134,000 or more in Missouri alone, who "can be educated and trained in special facilities geared to their needs and given an opportunity to lead happy, useful lives."

"A vital need exists for intensive research to uncover the causes and preventative measures in mental retardation," the proclamation continues, calling for all citizens to "give full support to this effort in behalf of the mentally retarded and their families."

Acknowledging Governor Hearnes' proclamation, MARC President Ramon V. Conklin of Kansas City, stated that "an alert public has become concerned with Missouri's retarded children. The retarded are receiving the special services which will enable them to be tax-producing earners, instead of tax-consumers." Conklin called for a continued public concern to make such services available to every retarded child in Missouri.

The Missouri Association for Retarded Children, with 30 local Associations, is the sole voluntary agency working entirely in the interest of the retarded. The Association provides consultation in program development, public information aids, and materials on help for retarded children. The Association, with offices at 100 West Dunklin, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101, offers speakers, films and literature on request.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: We have not seen my husband's family for years. His mother is domineering and tyrannical. Her children have ulcers and they're nervous or divorced.

My husband was lucky. He broke away at 18 and has not considered himself part of the family since. We have made attempts at limited contact but it has always ended in a fight, so we gave up.

Now his parents are old and crying around Florida because nobody visits them. My husband has begun to talk about the early memories, which were good. He says he wishes things could have been different.

A question has been raised about whether we should attend the funeral when the time comes. I say "No!" He feels he should go. Isn't this the height of hypocrisy? Your opinion is wanted.--COLUMBUS COUPLE

Dear Couple: When you die, Madame, I suggest that you leave your remains to a medical school. It would be interesting to find out what you've been using for a heart.

If you don't feel like going to the funeral when your in-laws pass on, stay home but please don't add to your husband's guilt by talking him out of going. I very much hope he goes to visit his parents while he can still see them alive. Without you they'll probably get along just dandy.

Dear Ann Landers: I call a spade a spade, so please clean up the language and print this letter.

I divorced my husband six years ago because he had the morals of an alley cat. Our daughter was eight years old. Last year he married a society dame who is filthy rich. She too was divorced and had two children by her former marriage.

Our daughter spends every Friday and Saturday with her father and his family. They live in a beautiful home, the kids have maid service and they eat on a mahogany table with organdy place mats.

Lately my daughter has found a lot wrong with me and our apartment. She says dad's place is more her style. Also the food over there is better. She told me yesterday that her dad is a wonderful man and I made a mistake when I divorced him.

I don't like the way things are heading. How does a mother tell a 14-year-old daughter that her dad was a rat?--EIGHT BALL

Dear Eight: You don't tell her any such thing. You try to give her a decent set of values so she will not be foiled into thinking that organdy place mats and maid service insures a happy home.

If you give your daughter love and a feeling of personal worth you need not worry about losing out.

Dear Ann Landers: Four years ago I became friendly with the real estate man (married) who sold us our home. He kept coming by the house several times a week to make sure the roof was in good shape, the furnace was O.K. and like that. Well, Ann, the inevitable happened. We fell for each other.

Five months ago my husband died. I know I should stop seeing this married man but I'm so depressed I can't make the break.

Last night I looked at his billfold which was on the dresser. When I saw the picture of his wife and four children I felt like a worm. But what is a lonely widow to do? Please. Tell me.--VALENTINE

Dear Val: Put that show on the road.

So you are lonesome? What was your excuse for the four years that your husband was alive? The short answer to your question, "What is a lonely widow to do?" goes like this: Straighten up and fly right.

Do you feel ill at ease. . .out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Today in U.S. History

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 17, the 321st day of 1965. There are 44 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1800, the U.S. Congress met for the first time in the newly erected Capitol in Washington.

On this date

In 1776, British forces led by Lord Cornwallis attacked Ft. Lee, N.J.

In 1891, Polish pianist, Ignace Jan Paderewski, made his American debut at Carnegie Hall in New York.

In 1939, the Nazis massacred students and professors at Prague Universtity of Czechoslovakia.

In 1942, Allied paratroop forces landed in Tunisia.

Ten years ago—An Air Force transport plane crashed into Mt. Charleston, near Las Vegas, Nev., killing 14 aboard.

Five years ago—In a move to halt the increasing deficit in the U.S. balance of payments, President Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered all federal agencies to cut foreign spending to a minimum.

One year ago—The U.N. Security Council was meeting in emergency session to hear charges of border clashes between Israel and Syria.

Liquid Assets in Bank Building

SAN FRANCISCO AP -- Belly right up to the teller's window, folks, and put down your money. What you'll get back will be a drink, not a receipt.

Kelly Buchanan, a real estate man, opened a new bar Monday in the branch office of the now defunct San Francisco National Bank.

He didn't make many changes. Remaining from the bank are a $7,000 chandelier and a $14,000 panel. Also around are red velvet sofas and leather ash trays from another branch of the doomed bank. Drinks are served through the teller's windows.

The U.S. controller of currency closed the bank.

Don C. Silverthorne, who founded the bank in 1962, has been charged with misapplying its funds and accepting fees illegally for arranging loans.

Arabic Zero

The ancient system of numerals used by the Arabs and Hindus had only nine elements, the figures 1 to 9. It was not until the 800s that the Arabs came to use 0 (or zero) as a symbol for no thing or no number.

FOUND—Linda Lee Ridings, 6, was found by police at Santa Ana, Calif., four years after her alleged kidnapping by an Indian baby sitter who kept the little girl with her in migratory labor camps and Indian settlements from California to Oklahoma.
